CHAP. II.—Ver. 1. My inexpressibly dear fellow-christians, I have written this to you to prevent your giving way to any known iniquity, or being surprised into it by temptation, or living in the practice of it; and that when, through infirmity and temptation, any of you fall into sin, ye may not despair of mercy or relief, but by faith rely on the glorious and prevalent intercession of Jesus Christ, in which he pleads our cause with his Father, the Judge of all, against all the charges of law and justice, and all the accusations of Satan, that our iniquities may neither be punished on, nor suffered to prevail and reign in us;—even upon the ground of his own finished and infinitely perfect righteouaness, performed in our room and stead, by which he made a full and complete atonement for all the sins of them that do, or shall hereafter, believe, not only Jews, but Gentiles, scattered everywhere in the world. 3. And let us rest assured, that, if we have any saving knowledge of Christ, or faith in, or love to him, it will powerfully influence us to a sincere, cheerful, and unreserved obedience to all his laws and gospel institutions. 4. To pretend to know, love, or believe on him, or to have had communion with him, without making conscience of keeping his holy commandments, gives the lie to our profession, and to the word of God; and manifests that neither the gospel nor the true grace of God has any place in our hearts. 5. But if we duly regard, hold fast, and carefully observe the doctrines, ordinances, and duties contained in his word, we are undoubtedly under the eminently governing influence of a supreme love to God, and have sufficient evidence that we are vitally united to Christ, and interested in all his benefits. 6. Every one therefore, who professes to be united to and interested in Christ, or to hold fellowship with him, is indispensably obliged to live a holy and righteous life in imitation of his.—7, 8. And in my earnestly pressing you to imitation of Christ, particularly in love to God and to one another, I impose no new commandment, but only remind you of a divine precept, which, as to the substance of it, was delivered as early as any Old Testament revelation; and was enforced by our dear Saviour in the beginning of his ministry, and preached to you at your first belief and profession of the gospel. Nevertheless, I further explain and inculcate this duty of brotherly love under new obligations, motives, encouragements, and assistances, as enjoined by Christ, in a more spiritual, extensive, and cordial view, and as exemplified by him in an unparalleled manner; because the darkness of the Jewish dispensation, and of your former state of ignorance, error, and sin, is in a great measure past; and the clear light of the gospel, or of Christ in it, is now displayed in its full glory, and shines into your hearts. 9—11. Let men make what professions they will of Christian knowledge, faith, holiness, or comfort, their habitual indulgence of an uncharitable, malicious, and revengeful temper of spirit towards their neighbours, and especially fellow-christians, infallibly marks them in a state of sin and error, destitute of all evangelical light and grace, quite ignorant of the way that leads to eternal life, and going on in errors and evil practices, without discerning or considering the fearful tendency thereof.—But they, who affectionately love their brethren for Christ's sake, manifest themselves savingly enlightened, and renewed by the grace of the gospel, and neither do they lay stumblingblocks in the way of others to hinder them from their duty; nor shall any difficulties hinder them from their own. 12—14. These admonitions, cautions, and encouragements, I write to you all, particularly to you, my dear weak believers; because that your faith, being true, however weak, ye have received the full and irrevocable forgiveness of all your sins through Jesus' blood, to the glory of his grace; and ye have been brought to a fiducial and affectionate knowledge of God, as your heavenly Father in him:—and to you who have had a long standing in Christianity, and have attained a large stock of knowledge and experience; because, taking pleasure to meditate on the deep things of God, ye have with great judgment, faith, and love, understood much of him, and of his eternal purposes and contrivances for your salvation:—and to you who, by zeal, activity, and spiritual attainments, are remarkably fitted for the Christian race and spiritual warfare; because ye have encountered, wrestled against, and obtained glorious victories over Satan and your lusts, and have the word of God deeply rooted in you, enabling you to perform the most difficult duties;—beseeching all of you to act answerably to your privileges and characters, in obedience to the whole divine law, particularly in loving God and one another. 15. And in order hereunto, never let your affections be engaged to this present evil world as your portion or rest, nor entangled with, engrossed by, or inordinately carried out after, any of its allurements; for if your hearts be supremely set upon worldly enjoyments, of whatever kind, ye can have no true love of God, the Father of Christ, and of all true believers in him. 16. For however enticing the things of this world are to the irregular desires of men's hearts, whether consisting in pleasures, suited to gratify lewd, intemperate, and luxurious inclinations; or in riches, estates, and possessions, suited to the covetous eye, which cannot be satisfied with them; or in honours, dignities, and preferments, grand pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world.

17 And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever.

19 They went out from us, but they were not of us; for if they had been of us, they would no doubt have continued with us: but they went out, that they might be made manifest that they were not all of us.

20 But ye have an unction from the Holy One, and ye know all things.

21 I have not written unto you because ye know not the truth, but because ye know it, and that no lie is of the truth.

22 Who is a liar but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ? He is antichrist that denieth the Father and the Son.

23 Whosoever denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father: [but he that acknowledgeth the Son, hath the Father also.]

24 [o]Let that therefore abide in you which ye have heard from the beginning. If that which ye have heard from the beginning shall remain in you, ye also shall [p]continue in the Son,[*] and in the Father.

25 [q]And this is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life.

26 [r]These things have I written unto you concerning them that seduce you.

27 But the anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you; and ye need not that any man teach you:[†] but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in[‡] him.

28 And now, little children, abide in him; that, when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming.

29 If ye know[§] that he is righteous, [‖]ye know that every one that doeth righteousness is born of him.

[s] Antichrist.—Rather, "the antichrist shall come." This word may signify one who puts himself into the place of Christ, or one that stands in opposition to him; and which last will be found the meaning by comparison with 2 Thes. 2. 4, where opposition to God is the essential character of "the man of sin." This "antichrist" may be either some eminent individual perfecting a long-continued system of opposition to Christ, of whom his predecessors were so many inferior types; or a personification of many by whom the system was successively sustained. It is evident from ver. 19, as well as from 1 Tim. 4. 1, that the chief characteristics of antichrist are: 1. Apostasy from apostolical, scriptural Christianity. 2. Opposition to Christ—whether to the doctrine of his Deity or humanity—whether it be opposition to his priestly office, by setting up new modes of atoning for sin, or other mediators between God and man—whether it be against his kingly office, by claiming authority to enact laws in his church, superadded, or contrary to, the Scriptures, or to relax or dispense with any of his commandments—or whether it be against his prophetical office, by claiming authority over the reading of his word, or to add to, alter, or take away from it.—Ed.

[a] John 3. 16. Ps. 36. 6, 7. & 89. 1, 2, 28.

BEHOLD[a] what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be houses, or furniture, calculated to feed pride and ambition;—their perverting and insnaring influence is not from God the Father of mercies, nor according to his design in giving them, nor affected by his love to, or his grace in, his people;—but it proceeds from the malignant influence of the things of this world upon men's carnal hearts, and their own corrupt inclinations to them. 17. And to arm you against all temptations, and take off all your inordinate affections from earthly things, think how uncertain, unsatisfying, fleeting, fading, and perishing they are, and how quickly they, and all our inclinations towards or gratification by them will come to an end; whereas they, who from a principle of faith, persist in a steadfast course of obedience to God's will, are possessed of substantial, satisfying, and abiding realities, and stand fixed in the everlasting favour of God, and in a state of grace, and shall for ever live in the full possession of all durable and heavenly happiness. 18. My dearly beloved fellow-christians, the many deceivers that have arisen in the world, in opposition to the person, doctrines, and laws of our Lord Jesus Christ, as forerunners of the Romish Antichrist, plainly manifest that we are already entered on the perilous times of God's last dispensation of mercy to men. 19. Their utter revolt from the faith and fellowship of the gospel, after they had made plausible appearances of being sincere converts; and separating themselves from our church communion, that they might broach and spread their errors or infamous practices; fully manifest that they were never true believers, renewed by grace as we are, but mere hypocrites and false-hearted professors. 20. But ye who are true believers have, through the intercession and influence of our infinitely holy and sanctifying Saviour, been richly endowed with the Holy Ghost in his gifts and graces; by means of which ye are led into an experimental and practical knowledge of everything necessary for your preservation from seduction, or your eternal salvation. 21. I therefore write to you, not as to persons ignorant of the fundamental truths of the gospel concerning Christ, but as to those who already know, believe, and esteem them, and are well assured that no fraud, deceit, or error, such as these seducers promote, can proceed from the gospel, or be consistent with it,—in order that I may further confirm and establish you in it. 22, 23. And none more certainly manifest themselves impostors and false teachers, than they who, contrary to all the evidence given by the prophets and apostles, and by his Father's and his own declarations, miracles, and conduct, deny Jesus of Nazareth to be the eternal Son of God and promised Messiah come in the flesh: and, in so doing, deny the Father as connected with him in his divine character and mediatorial office.—Whereas they who cordially own, believe, and confess him to be the Father's co-equal and co-eternal Son, and the only Saviour of lost sinners sent by him, duly honour both Father and Son, and have a right knowledge of the Father, and a special interest in his favour through his Son. 24. Let therefore the true doctrine concerning Christ and his Father, in which ye were instructed from the very beginning of your Christian profession, be still embraced, held fast, and fixed in you, as an abiding principle; thus shall ye manifest yourselves saints indeed, and shall have abiding union and fellowship with Christ, and his Father through him, to your complete salvation; 25. And shall inherit that whole extent of eternal life, in grace here, and glory hereafter, which is purchased by Christ, promised in the new covenant, and offered in the gospel. 26. These hints I have given you, to establish, comfort, and fortify you against those adversaries of Christ, who, by subtle and insnaring artifices, labour to corrupt your principles and practices, and draw you away from the simplicity of the gospel. 27. But I need not insist upon them, because the Holy Ghost, who is incapable of, and infinitely hates, all deceit and falsehood, in his person, gifts, and graces, does and shall perpetually dwell in you, to enlighten, guide, govern, and lead you into the knowledge of all things necessary to salvation, and render you perseveringly steadfast in Christ and his truth. 28. I beseech you therefore, my dear little children, carefully to adhere to Christ and the pure doctrines of the gospel, and your holy profession thereof, that, at his glorious appearance to judge the world, our expectations of you may not be disappointed, but we may have the satisfaction to see you appear with him in glory, as persons truly converted to him, and built up in him, by our ministrations. 29. And since we trust ye have right thoughts of Christ, our righteous Mediator, who also bestows righteousness upon his people, ye cannot but know that every one, who from a principle of faith and love to him, habitually practises what is right, and lives in imitation of and obedience to him, is, by his regenerating Spirit, endued with abiding principles of saving grace, and is, by adoption made a child of God and heir of eternal glory.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—The gospel at once delightfully dissuades from sin, and provides relief under the oppressive sense of it. And happy is it that Jesus' ever-prevalent intercession for his people is founded on his infinitely valuable and all-efficacious atonement. But it is absurd to pretend knowledge of Christ, or union or fellowship with him, without conscientiously keeping his commandments and following his holy example.—Though now under the gospel the law of brotherly love has new manifestations and enforcements, it was always the same in substance. And it is impossible for men either to be or live like Christians without practising it. In Christ's family on earth, what different degrees are there of grace and experience! But the weakest saints have their sins fully forgiven them, and love their heavenly Father. And the more they grow in grace, the more established are they in the faith, and capable of resisting and conquering the devil and his instruments,—while the ripest for glory have the deepest acquaintance with God and his counsels.—But, alas, the prevailing love of this world is a fatal enemy to all true practical religion. Its precarious, empty, and perishing pleasures, riches, and honours, often carry off men's hearts from everything eternal and divine. Crafty seducers and ruinous errors greatly plague the church in every age. And how many, by their apostasy from the practice and profession of the gospel, manifest that they were never truly chosen by God, nor believed on his Son! Infinite then is the mercy, that the Holy Ghost, by his enlightening and attractive influences, so brings and binds all the elect to Christ, that not one of them can ever fully or finally apostatize from his truths or ways; and that his infallible promise of eternal life secures their growth in holiness, and honourable appearance before his tribunal.

CHAP. III.—Ver. 1. Behold with attention, admiration, gratitude, joy, and praise, what free and transcendent love and mercy the great JEHOVAH hath bestowed on us, in making us,—who are, in ourselves, altogether worthless, mean, vile, and contemptible sinners—his regenerated and adopted sons, heirs of himself and all the blessings of his new covenant! No wonder the carnal and wicked called the sons of God! therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not.

2 Beloved, now are we the sons of God; and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is.

3 And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure.

4 Whosoever committeth sin transgresseth also the law: for sin is the transgression of the law.

5 And ye know that he was manifested to take away our sins; and in him is no sin.

6 Whosoever abideth in him sinneth not:* whosoever sinneth hath not seen him, neither known him.

7 Little children, let no man deceive you: he that doeth righteousness is righteous, even as he is righteous.

8 He that committeth sin is of the devil: for the devil sinneth from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil.

9 Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him: and he cannot sin,† because he is born of God.

10 In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil: whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother.

11 For [a]this is the [*]message that ye heard from the beginning, [b]that we should love one another.

12 Not as [c]Cain, who was of that wicked one, and slew his brother. And wherefore slew he him? Because his own works were evil, and his brother's righteous.†

13 Marvel not, my brethren, [d]if the world hate you.

14 [e]We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death.

15 [f]Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer:‡ and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him.

16 [g]Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us; and [h]we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren.

17 But [i]whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?

18 My little children, [k]let us not love in word, neither in tongue; but in deed and in truth.

men of this world do not esteem, love, or own, but hate us who bear his image, since they are ignorant of his nature and will, and do not esteem, approve, nor acknowledge either Father or Son. 2. My dear fellow-christians, notwithstanding our many natural and sinful infirmities, and our apparently despicable meanness, we are already the sons and heirs of God by regeneration, adoption, and marriage-union to his Son; and therefore, though neither worldly men around us, nor even ourselves, can as yet conceive the excellency of our station, or the full glory and happiness that are annexed to it;—yet by faith, and by the witness of his Spirit, we certainly know that, when Jesus Christ shall appear in his glory to judge the world, we, by the views and influences of his divine and mediatorial glory, then fully revealed, shall be made, and appear, like him in light, and love, holiness, happiness, and glory. 3. And wherever the true and well-grounded hope of this is, it powerfully influences to aim at, and endeavour through grace to attain, all possible purity in heart and life, in imitation of and conformity to him and his superlative purity and holiness. 4. But whoever wilfully lives in any known sin, not only rebels against the light, grace, and obligations of the gospel, but manifestly violates the moral law, which is holy, just, and good: for the strict and proper notion of sin is a deviation from, or contrariety in, disposition, thought, word, or deed, to the law of God, that unchangeable rule of righteousness, which is a transcript of his holy nature and will. 5. And nothing can be more evident, than that the allowed practice of any sin is inconsistent with a good hope of being glorified together with Christ at his second coming, since the whole gospel shows, that the end of his first appearance in the flesh was, that, by his sacrifice of himself, he might deliver us from the guilt, power, pollution, and inbeing of our sins; and his perfect holiness caused all expiation for himself to be needless, and renders it impossible for him to have fellowship with wilful sinners. 6. Such therefore as abide in him, by vital union and gracious fellowship, cannot sin deliberately, habitually, presumptuously, and wilfully. And if any professor sin in this manner, he has never had any spiritual knowledge of or faith in Christ, nor any experimental and saving fellowship with him. 7. Let therefore no false teacher impose upon you, my dear children. Fix it in your minds, as a certain and important truth, that it is only they, who, from principles of faith and love, conscientiously and habitually work righteousness in all their dealings with God or men, that are sustained, as inherently and actively righteous before God, in conformity to Jesus, who loved and constantly fulfilled all righteousness. 8. Whoever deliberately, habitually, presumptuously, and wilfully works iniquity, under the influence of his inward corruptions, is a child and obedient subject of the devil, who, from the very beginning of time, has constantly persisted in sinning himself, and in tempting his fellow angels and mankind to sin, to their everlasting ruin. Now this is so contrary to everything said, done, or countenanced by Christ, that he, the eternal Son of God, came into this world as sent by his Father, that, by his doctrine, obedience, and sufferings, he might counteract the devil, and deliver men from that sin and misery which he had introduced. 9. Whosoever therefore is, by the regenerating power of the Holy Ghost, made partaker of a divine nature, is no longer a wilful and habitual worker of iniquity, like the devil and his children; for that divine principle of grace, which was infused into him in his regeneration, has an abiding root and residence in him to rule and govern him, that he can no more love and live in sin, or sin with deliberation and full consent of his will, as he was wont to do,—or continue impenitent in the sins into which he had been surprised by temptation;—because, being a child of God, and born of the Spirit, he has received an indwelling habit or principle of grace that wills and works in direct opposition to all sin. 10. By these habitual inclinations and exercises, either in opposition to, or in favour of sin, are the children of God and those of the devil plainly distinguished, and openly discovered and known to be such; for let men's pretences be what they will, if they do not love, and habitually live in the practice of religion and morality, and have not a sincere and cordial affection for their Christian brethren, it is impossible they can be the regenerated or adopted children of God. 11. For both our Lord himself, and his apostles and servants, have all along urged, that, if we profess to be his followers, we should dearly love one another, and labour to promote one another's real advantage. 12. Not imitating Cain, that first-born of our fallen parents, and notorious child of the devil, who, under the malignant influence of that infernal father, cruelly murdered his brother Abel, for no other reason but because his works were better in themselves, and more respected by God, than his own abominable actions. 13. Never therefore marvel at it as a new and strange thing, if wicked men, those children of the devil, should hate you as Cain did Abel; there being an established enmity between the seed of the woman and of the old serpent. 14, 15. And never let us be uneasy under the hatred of the world, since God loveth us; and since our sincere and cordial love, to all that bear his image, is a manifest proof that we are translated from a state of condemnation to a state of justification and adoption to eternal life, and are quickened from a death in sin, to a life of righteousness and holiness:—whereas they who do not love the saints, as beloved by, and belonging to, Christ, and bearing his image, are still in a state of condemnation and spiritual death. Nay, he that, instead of cultivating this Christian temper towards his brother, indulges wrath, malice, envy, and revenge, is, in God's reckoning, a murderer; and such a one the word of God represents as having no principle of spiritual life abiding in him, or any title to, or meetness for, eternal life. —16. Since then the eternal Son of God freely and cheerfully gave himself an offering and sacrifice to God, to make atonement for our sins, and purchase our eternal salvation, we have a marvellous evidence of the truth and greatness of his love towards us; with which we ought to be so deeply affected and influenced, as to stand ready to expose our very lives for encouraging the faith and hope of his ransomed people, and for the preservation of such as are eminently serviceable in the church. 17. But if, instead of copying Christ's example, we can see our Christian brethren in necessitous circumstances, yet harden our hearts against them, and decline relieving them when God has put it in our power, how can we pretend to have the faith of God's love to us, or any interest in, or real love to, God abiding in us? 18. Let us not, my brethren, content ourselves with even the strongest expressions of compassion and kindness to our fellow-christians and neighbours, but let us demonstrate our love in proper acts of beneficence and

CHAPTER IV.

(1) The duty of, and rules for, trying the spirits of teachers: 1—6. (2) Love farther inculcated: 7—21.

BELOVED, [a] believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God; because many false prophets are gone out into the world.

2 [b] Hereby know ye the Spirit of God: Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh[*] is of God:

3 And every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God: and this is that spirit[†] of antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now already is it in the world.

4 Ye are of God, little children, and have overcome them: because greater is he that is in you, than he that is in the world.

5 They are of the world: therefore speak they of the world, and the world heareth them.

6 We are of God: he that knoweth God heareth us; he that is not of God heareth not us. [c] Hereby know we the spirit of truth, and the spirit of error.

7 Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God.

8 He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love.

9 In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him.

[*] The Docetæ, an early race of anti-christian teachers, denied the humanity of Christ; and against them this test seems to be directed. It will not, however, follow, as Humanitarians would infer, that our Lord was a mere man; but, on the contrary, clearly implies, as does Paul elsewhere, that he might have come in the "nature of angels," or in "the form of God." Heb. 2. 14—16. Phil. 2. 6.—Ed.

[†] That spirit (rather, "mark") of antichrist, "which confesses not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh," Romanists deny to be applicable to the popedom, because it confesses to this doctrine. Now, in one sense this is true—in another, and the only important sense, it is untrue. By the coming of Jesus Christ in the flesh "he bore our sins in his own body on the tree;"—"and his blood cleanseth us from all sin;" whereas the Romish traditions ascribe the cleansing from sin and acceptance with God to penances, purgatory, and masses, the merits and intercessions of the Virgin Mary, apostles, saints, and angels; and thus, setting up human inventions, make altogether void the scriptural doctrine of the incarnation and atonement of the Son of God.—Ed.

service, and in offices of substantial friendship, according to our professions: 19. And by the prevalence of this excellent temper and conduct, we have sure evidence that God has regenerated us by his word of truth, and brought us to understand, believe, and live under the government of the true principles of the gospel as sincere Christians; and shall be imboldened to appeal to him for our integrity, whatever censures the world may pass upon us; which will comfortably free us from the stinging reproaches of a self-condemning conscience. 20. For if our conscience, which is the deputy and candle of the Lord, witness against, accuse, and condemn us of allowed hypocrisy, in our professions of love, or of adherence to the truths of the gospel, what an awful sentence may we expect from God, who is infinitely more great and just, and better acquainted with our whole conduct! 21. But if our conscience, upon due deliberation, under the enlightening and witnessing of the Holy Ghost, according to the truth of the gospel, acquit us from all charges of reigning or allowed guile, we may, in proportion to our consciousness of this, have humble boldness in our claim of God as our God and Father, in our professions of love to him and his people, and in appeals to him concerning our integrity; and a holy freedom, courage, and liberty of soul in our fiducial pleadings with him. 22. And our unfeigned respect to all his commandments, and endeavours always to do what is acceptable in his sight by Jesus Christ, are an evidence that we have such interest in his favour, as that we shall receive, in due time, whatever blessings we sincerely and humbly pray for, according to his will, with faith in Christ, and for right ends.—23. And this is the great commandment of God, which is fundamental to, and comprehensive of, all the rest, that we should heartily receive and rest upon Christ alone for salvation, as he is offered unto us in the gospel; and, influenced by this faith, should love all his people, as his members, in obedience to his commandments. 24. All they therefore who conscientiously keep his commandments, from a principle of faith working by love, manifest that they live in a state of vital union to, and gracious fellowship with, Christ and his Father, and have these divine Persons dwelling in them by faith; and we, who stand in this near and happy relation to Christ and his Father, are assured that he lives with abiding influence in us, by the light, energy, and witness of his Holy Spirit, which he has freely given us, to produce, excite, and assist in the exercise of faith, love, and every other grace, in our souls.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—Astonishing is the love of God in making sinful men his children by regeneration and adoption. And notwithstanding their mean or contemptible appearance on earth, great shall be their glory and happiness in the last judgment and the eternal state. Evangelical hopes of everlasting happiness powerfully influence to the study of holiness in heart and life: and an inward principle of grace, under the influence of the Holy Ghost, effectually determines to hate and oppose everything sinful; as a rebellion against God, a counteracting of Christ's mediation, and an imitation of and obedience to Satan.—Faith as working by love, and love as influencing to an obedience to all God's commandments, are the principal characteristics of a Christian. And it is not high professions, but true and practical love to our fellow-christians, and the conscientious regard to all the laws of God, that will evidence us true believers, children of God, and temples of Christ, his Father, and Spirit. But nothing can more effectually prove us the devil's children and servants than neglect of, or murderous hatred against, our fellow-christians or neighbours.—There is need then of a thorough self-examination on these points. And if we cannot abide the trial of our own consciences, how shall we abide the judgment of a heart-searching God!

CHAP. IV.—Ver. 1. Take heed, my dear fellow-christians, to whom God has given his Spirit, that ye do not hearken to, nor be seduced by, every pretender to that Spirit, or by every doctrine which such a one may broach under colour of extraordinary light and immediate revelation; but, before you espouse these high pretenders, carefully examine, by the oracles of God, what manner of spirit they have, what doctrine they preach, what lives they lead, and what aims they follow; and there is great need of your being very cautious on this head, as, according to our Saviour's predictions, multitudes of impostors are now gone abroad, and making a great noise in the world. 2, 3. Now, that ye may certainly distinguish the spirits, know that every one who, under profession of preaching by the light and inspiration of the Spirit, cordially believes, freely owns, and boldly professes his faith in Christ as the eternal Son of God, who hath assumed our nature, and fulfilled all righteousness in our stead, and for our eternal salvation, appears to be truly inspired and authorized by God. But whoever denies that Christ is the true God, or promised Messiah, or denies his true manhood, or satisfaction therein for our sins, is not enlightened nor authorized, nor born of God;—but is actuated by that spirit of opposition to Christ and his truths which has already begun to appear in the world. 4. Ye, my dear children, are born of God, and have been taught by his Spirit to avoid, withstand, and overcome these impostors, and their errors and wicked practices, by the steadfastness of your faith, profession, and obedience;—God, who dwells in you by his spirit, being infinitely superior in wisdom and power to that antichristian spirit which is gone forth into the world, and to Satan himself, under whom it acts and works in the children of disobedience. 5. The views, interests, and doctrines of these impostors relate to the riches, honours, and pleasures of this present evil world; and therefore they propagate such notions of secular dominion and grandeur as are agreeable to carnal men; and hence their hearers, who place their happiness in worldly things, hearken to them, and greedily suck in their corrupt doctrines, as most suitable to their own inclinations. 6. But we, who preach an incarnate and crucified Saviour as the only way to everlasting happiness, are enlightened, approved, sent, and owned by, as well as born of God. Whoever, therefore, truly knows anything of God, according to the discoveries which he has made of himself in Christ, by the gospel, diligently attends to, and heartily receives the divine truths, which we preach by the direction of his Spirit. But they who have not been enlightened and renewed by God, pay no regard to our spiritual doctrine concerning Christ as the only true Messiah, nor to us who preach it. By this we easily and clearly discern whether men preach under the direction of God's Spirit of truth, or under the influence of the erroneous spirit of the devil.—7, 8. Now, to return to what I much aim at in this epistle, let all of us labour always to maintain, express, and show forth the most sincere and brotherly affection one to another; for such love is begotten, commanded, and approved by God, and it manifests him that lives in the exercise of it, to be a child of God, regenerated by his Spirit, and possessed of an experimental, appropriating, and transforming knowledge of the perfections and will of God;—and, on the other hand, he that is a stranger to the exercise of love to the saints or his neighbours, appears ignorant of the nature and will of God; for God is, in his very nature, an infinity of grace, mercy, and love: and in his thoughts, purposes, and dispensations, has manifested himself an infinitely glorious and engaging pattern of kindness and good-will. 9, 10. And this his love has been peculiarly manifested towards us, in his freely sending his only begotten and infinitely well-beloved Son to assume our nature: and by obeying and dying in our stead to atone for our sins, who are mean worms, enemies, and ungodly wretches,—that thereby he might purchase eternal salvation and happiness for us, and effectually bestow it upon us. 11. Now if God loved us at so high and astonishing a rate, we, whom he has thus loved and redeemed by the precious blood of his Son, most certainly ought, under the influence of this love, and in imitation of it, to maintain the most ardent affection towards our Christian brethren for his sake, and in obedience to his will. 12. But since our love to God himself cannot be drawn out by any bodily sight of him, let us show it by our regard to the saints, those visible representations of him: for if we love one another as bearing his image, it manifests that we love him, and that he dwells in us by his Spirit to produce this love; and thereby his love to us is eminently and most effectually manifested, and ours to him is brought to its true form, and eminently exercised and proved to be sincere: 13. Yea, by this we have a comfortable evidence of our dwelling, by faith and love, in union and communion with God through Christ; and of his dwelling in our souls by gracious manifestations and influences; because he has freely afforded us rich communications of his Spirit, to beget and animate this faith and love, and to cast a light upon his own work in us. 14. And we apostles, who were eye-witnesses of Christ's manhood, preaching, miracles, sufferings, death, resurrection, and ascension to glory, do, upon infallible evidence, attest that the eternal Father sent his only begotten Son to take upon him our nature, and by this his course of obedience and sufferings to be the Redeemer of both Jews and Gentiles, who do or shall believe on him throughout the whole world. 15. Whoever therefore, in these perilous times, from a principle of faith and love, boldly confess Jesus Christ to be the only begotten Son of God, and only Saviour of lost sinners, thereby manifest that God dwells in them by his Spirit, who has led them to these just sentiments of Christ, and that they dwell in God by faith and love, through the great Mediator.—16. And we, who have the experience of this, are fully persuaded, on the ground of gospel revelation, and the concurring witness of the Spirit with our spirits, that the most peculiar, transcendent, and distinguishing love is in the heart of God towards us, and is manifested in his sending his Son to be the propitiation for our sins, that we might live through him, and thus enjoy God, as altogether love, mercy, and grace to us, without any mixture of fury or wrath against us. And if we live under the power of a hearty and ardent love to him, and to his children for his sake, he and we have the most delightful and reciprocal union and communion: 17. Yea, this manifestation of the sincerity and strength of our love, encourages us to hope that we shall appear, with humble confidence, before him, as true believers, in the awful day of judgment; because, as he is all love to us, so we, even in this tempting and insnaring world, have our hearts filled with a supreme love to him, and with a sincere and ardent love to his children for his sake. 18. This love is indeed ever attended with a holy filial reverence of him, and cautious fear of offending him, yet, as we thereby know that we are passed from death to life, there is no distrustful, despairing, or terrifying fear of him in it, as if he were our enemy. And the more strong and fervent our love is, under an assuring sense of his love to us, the more effectually it banishes all diffident, slavish, and tormenting fear of him. 19. For our love to him is kindled by, and is the fruit and effect of his free love to us, which was from eternity in his gracious purposes, and was manifested in time by gracious declarations and works, antecedent to, and the immediate cause of, all our love to him; 20. And this our superlative love to him is necessarily connected with a sincere love to all his children. To pretend to love God, and yet indulge an uncharitable, irreconcilable, and malicious temper towards our fellow-christians, is to give the lie to our profession, and to all the declarations of Scripture, concerning true love to him; for if we bear not a love to our brethren in the faith and fellowship of the gospel, whom we have seen with our bodily eyes, and in whom we discern visible traces of the image of God, how can we ever love God himself, who, being invisible, can make no impression of himself upon our bodily senses, to affect our heart, or move or engage our affection!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—When, in every age, there are so many crafty seducers, there is always great need to try preachers and doctrines by the unerring standard of God's word. And it is a mercy that, when worldly-minded men so eagerly follow worldly-minded impostors, God so marks his faithful ministers with truth, holiness, and success, in winning souls, that every unbiassed observer may discern the difference.—Astonishing is God's love to us, in first so caring for us, as to give his only begotten Son to be our atoning sacrifice, and our effectual Saviour and portion; and in giving his Spirit to dwell in us, for the effectual application of all his purchased blessings. What can engage our hearts to a grateful love to God, a candid and open confession of his truths, and a sincere and affectionate love to his people, if this do not! The consciousness of God's loving us, and our loving him by his grace, affords us great comfort and boldness in all our dealings with him.—But never let me reckon myself a Christian if I do not love all men, especially the saints, as far as they bear Christ's image.

CHAP. V.—Ver. 1. Fix it in your minds, as the most important truth, that whoever cordially believes that Jesus Christ is the promised Messiah, and depends on him, as the anointed Prophet, Priest, and King of his church, for all salvation, is regenerated by the Spirit of God; and such as, from this principle of faith, have a supreme love to God, esteem of, desire after, and delight in him, cannot but bear a good will to, and delight in, every Christian brother, as beloved of God, and spiritually begotten after his image. 2. And then we love the children of God aright, on account of their relation and likeness to him, when our love proceeds from such a prevailing love to himself, as inclines and engages us to endeavour after all holy obedience to his commandments. 3. Yea, such an impartial respect, and delightful obedience to all God's commandments, without counting any of them a heavy burden, is alone the distinguished mark of an unfeigned and governing love to him. 4. For whosoever is truly regenerated by the Spirit of God, he himself, and all that new nature which is produced in him by faith in Christ, and by virtue derived from him, will so withstand, overcome, and triumph over the terrors and allurements of the men and things of this world, as not to be disheartened by the one, nor drawn aside from his duty by the other. 5. But it is only by believing on Christ, as the true Messiah, and only begotten Son of God, and depending on him, by a lively and effectual faith, for justification, sanctification, and complete salvation, that any man, Jew or Gentile, can be so weaned from, and mortified to the things of this world. 6. Now the character of this Saviour of the world was well attested at his baptism, and in his bloody death, and, after his resurrection, by the powerful influences of the Holy Ghost, in applying his salvation to multitudes, and in the miraculous gifts bestowed, and cures effected, for the confirmation of the gospel. 7. For there are three divine persons, the habitation of whose glory is in heaven, who thence bore, and still bear, testimony to the incarnate Saviour, as the true Messiah;—the Father, by repeated declarations from heaven, and by raising him from the dead; the Son, by repeated avowals of his divine and mediatorial character, and by authoritative instructions and unnumbered miracles wrought in his own name;—and the Holy Ghost, in visibly descending on him at his baptism, and by coming forth from him, after his ascension, to spread his name, kingdom, and glory in the world.—And these three, though personally distinct, in a manner which infinitely transcends our most enlarged conceptions, are not only equal in power and glory, but essentially one thing, being, and substance; one God, in distinction from, and opposition to, the many pretended deities of the Heathens and others. 8. Meanwhile, on earth, the miraculous gifts, and saving graces of the Holy Spirit,—the spotless purity of Christ's human nature, his holy doctrine, and ordinance of Christian baptism,—his blood or righteousness represented in his supper, and applied to the consciences of believers,—harmoniously attest him as the divine, complete, and only Saviour of sinners. 9. If then we readily depend, in the most important matters of life, upon the testimony of two or three credible men, how much more may we depend on the testimony of these three Divine Persons and things, that Christ is God's only-begotten and eternal Son, and the only true Messiah. 10. Whosoever therefore, upon this divine evidence, cordially believes and trusts in this incarnate Son of God as his only and all-sufficient Saviour, has not only received into his heart the witness of God, but has, in his soul, an experimental and satisfying testimony of the suitableness, worth, and excellency of Christ; and of his ability, willingness, and authority to deliver him from all sin and misery, and bring him to all spiritual and eternal happiness:—but whosoever rejects the testimony which God has given concerning his Son in the gospel, as altogether sufficient, and given to him in particular for salvation, flatly contradicts, and gives the lie to the most high, holy, and faithful God. 11. Now this is the sum of the testimony which God bears concerning his Son—that, in infinite love, he has made a full and free offer of grace and glory to us sinners of mankind in the everlasting gospel; and, according to his own eternal counsel and mere good pleasure, has graciously and irrevocably conferred upon us, who believe in him, a full right and title to, meetness for, and beginnings, earnests, and foretastes of eternal life; as all purchased by, lodged in, communicated by, and to be enjoyed in a state of union and communion with Christ. 13. These divine testimonies concerning Christ I have set in so clear and strong a light before you, who, under a sense of your helpless, guilty, and ruined state, have heartily received and rested on him as your only Saviour, that, by the word of God, and witness of his Spirit with your spirit, ye may have a comfortable assurance, that ye have not only the earnest and anticipating possession of eternal life, but have the whole of it in Christ your Head: and that ye may be excited and encouraged more and more steadfastly to believe in, and depend for your whole salvation upon, the merits and mediation of the only begotten Son of God. 14, 15. And we, who truly believe in him, are not only assured that God will bring us safe to everlasting happiness, but that he will graciously grant us whatever blessings we ask by faith in Christ's name, according to the declarations of his will given us in his word. 16. Now if God so readily hear the prayers that are offered to him with faith in the name of Christ, we ought to pray for forgiveness of sins of every kind to our Christian brethren and fellows of mankind, in hopes of obtaining it; except only the sin against the Holy Ghost, which God has fixed as unpardonable, and infallibly connected with eternal damnation. 17, 18. Every disposition, thought, word, or deed, contrary to that equity prescribed by God's law, is sinful; but every sin is not that unpardonable transgression. Nay, whosoever is really regenerated by the spirit of God, on account of the Spirit's continued indwelling and influence in his soul, and the immortal nature of that grace implanted in him, and through his own watchfulness against, and hearty detestation of sin, has an effectual security against being ever seduced into that unpardonable sin. 19. Now we certainly know that we have, by regeneration, been made partakers of a divine nature, as a powerful and abiding principle of holiness, and that all the rest of the world, who have never experienced this new birth, continue voluntarily under the power of sin and Satan. 20. And from all the undoubted proofs before insisted on, we certainly know that Jesus Christ, the eternal Son of God, hath assumed our human nature, and come into our world to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself; and that he hath not only given us an external revelation in his word, but a saving knowledge of him as the Way, the Truth, and the Life, by an internal operation of his Spirit. Yea, we are vitally united to him, who is the true and faithfull Witness as Mediator, and as the Son of God is the only living and true God, together with the Father and Spirit, and who, having all life in himself, is the Purchaser and Giver of spiritual and eternal life to us. 21. Let me therefore beseech you, who have such relation to, and fellowship with, the true God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, to abstain from every appearance of fellowship with Pagans in their idolatrous worship, or from giving anything too high a place in your hearts.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—There can be no real Christianity without being begotten and born of God by his implantation of a supernatural and vital principle of grace in our heart. But no inward principle of grace can be manifested without actings of faith on Christ, of love to God and his people, and of weanedness of heart from the pleasures, riches, and honours of this world. But the more fully and firmly we, through the gospel, believe on Christ, as our divinely sent and well qualified and furnished Saviour, the more complete will be our weanedness from and victory over the world.—What infallible testimonies concerning Christ are revealed unto us, to encourage and found our faith in him! Nothing then can be more highly reasonable than to rest in him, assured of our eternal life in and through him as the free gift of God. And it is highly criminal and ruinous to our own souls, by discrediting his gospel declarations and promises, to give the lie to JEHOVAH'S solemn attestations. It is a sure ground of hope in our pleading for every necessary blessing, that Christ has purchased and intercedes for it, and God has promised, for his sake, to bestow it. But dreadful, as well as unpardonable, is the crime of desperate and wilful rejection of Christ and the gospel; and great need have Christians to guard against every approach to it, and to make sure their regeneration by God's Spirit, as an effectual preservative against it. Thrice happy are they who conscientiously improve their assured knowledge, faith, and hope, in carefully keeping their heart and life for God alone, in opposition to every idolatrous rival.

THE SECOND EPISTLE

OF

J O H N,

"THE ELDER," is a title derived from age, or experience as equivalent to age; and as John was now the senior apostle,—most probably the senior Christian,—the title would be peculiarly appropriate. It is also a title which John was likely to employ in preference to his own name, which he was accustomed to suppress.

"The Elect Lady," Clemens Alexandrinus supposes to have been a Babylonian named "Eclecta;" and the Vulgate, Boothroyd, and others, render the words "the lady Eclecta;" Benson and others translate the inscription "To the elect Kyria;" Cassiodorus believed the epistle to have been addressed to a particular church; others, that it was intended for the Christian church generally, (comp. Is. liv. 1; Gal. iv. 24, &c.) The authorized version is supported by Beza, &c.; and both the absence and use of the Greek article (ver. 1, being comp. with ver. 13,) appear to decide in favour of this opinion.—ED.

(1) The salutation to the elect lady: 1—3. (2) The apostle's joy over the Christian walk of some of her children: 4. (3) He beseeches her to persevere in the walk of Christian love: 5, 6. (4) Warns her to beware of deceivers: 7—11. (5) Hopes to see her again, and transmits the greeting of her sister's children: 12, 13.

THE [a]elder unto the [b]elect lady and her children, whom [c]I love* in the truth;† and not I only, but also all they that have known the truth;

2 [d]For the truth's sake, which dwelleth in us, and shall be with us for ever.

3 [e]Grace be with you, mercy, and peace, from God the Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of the Father, [f]in truth‡ and love.

4 [g]I rejoiced greatly that I found of thy children walking in truth, as we have received a commandment from the Father.§

5 And now I beseech thee, lady, not as though I wrote a new commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning,‖ that we love one another.

6 And this is love, that we walk after his commandments. This is the commandment, That, as ye have heard from the beginning, ye should walk in it.

7 [h]For many deceivers are entered into the world, who confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh. This is a deceiver* and an antichrist.

8 [i]Look to yourselves, that we lose not those things which we have †wrought, but that we receive a full reward.

9 [k]Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God.‡ He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son.

10 [l]If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed:§

11 For he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds.

12 Having many things to write unto you, I would not write with paper and ink: but I trust to come unto you, and speak ‖face to face, that our joy may be full.

13 The children* of thy elect sister greet thee. Amen.

* From comparing ver. 4 and 13, it will appear highly probable, that the apostle had found some of the children of these two pious sisters at a distance from their mothers, for such separations are unavoidable, and that the chief object of his writing was to convey that most delightful of all earthly intelligence—the community of family religion, which promises and secures to the separated on earth, the meeting of a family in heaven.—ED.

EXPLANATORY NOTES.—Ver. 1—3. Dear lady, whom God has from eternity chosen to everlasting life, and, by the powerful influence of his grace, rendered a choice and lively Christian, and whom I, and all other sincere believers of the gospel, and faithful adherents to its truths, affectionately love and esteem, not on account of your high birth or your abundant wealth, but for your experience of, conformity, and regard to those truths; I, who am an aged ruler of the Christian church, wish to you and yours the most abundant enjoyment of all those new covenant blessings which proceed from the redeeming mercy and grace of God our Father, through Jesus Christ our dear and now exalted Saviour; and that you all may be thereby animated to walk in truth and in universal love, according to the tenor of that glorious gospel with which he has favoured you. 4. It was with inexpressible pleasure that I found, when with you, some, though not all, of your children effectually converted to Christ by the power of his gospel truths, and firmly adhering to them, and earnestly practising them, in a course of progressive holiness, thereby manifesting the truth and liveliness of their inward grace, according to the commandment which we have received from God the Father. 5, 6. Let me therefore beseech you, my dear and honoured lady, that according to the law of God, long ago delivered under the Old Testament, and more lately inculcated on us, with additional motives and obligations, by our dear Redeemer in the days of his flesh, you and your children would earnestly persevere in the most affectionate love to, sympathy with, and care for, all that bear his image, and that you would manifest your love to him in a constant, laborious, and progressive study of holiness, in all manner of conversation, according to his commandments, which have been so plainly and faithfully delivered unto you. 7, 8. I the rather beg your earnest attention to these things which you were taught when first you embraced the gospel, as many preachers have now gone abroad into the world, who, pretending a mission from Christ, an uncommon zeal for his truths, and love to the souls of men, do, in direct opposition to his declarations, interests, and honour, maintain that he did not assume, nor obey, nor suffer in, a true human nature, but merely in appearance of it;—let me therefore beseech you, and other Christian friends to whom this letter may come, to be on your strictest watch, and to guard against the seductions of such, that ye may not fall short of the gracious reward of your acceptance, profession, and practising of the gospel, and your sufferings for it, which you expect; and that we ministers may not lose the comfort which we hopea to have in your distinguished eternal salvation, as the seals of our ministry: 9. For as he who believes with his heart the doctrines of the gospel concerning Christ's person, offices, and work, and steadily adheres to them in his profession and practice, hath a spiritual knowledge of, interest in, and fellowship with, Christ and his Father;—so he who does not believe, teach, and practise them, but labours to seduce his hearers into the contrary errors, has no saving knowledge of, interest in, or fellowship with either. 10, 11. If therefore any preacher appears among you who does not declare and inculcate these very doctrines concerning Jesus Christ, and the redemption of sinners through his blood, according to the riches of God's grace, which we delivered unto you, see that ye give him not the smallest encouragement, by entertaining him in your houses, or wishing him any success in his ministrations;—for whoever wishes him success, or familiarly converses with him, is accounted by God as a criminal encourager and assistant of him in spreading his errors, to the dishonour of Christ and the eternal ruining of men.

REFLECTIONS.—It is a great pleasure for ministers and Christians to observe persons of quality, and their children, heartily embracing the uncorrupted doctrines of the gospel, and walking answerably unto them; and to see the grace of God spreading through a whole family. And exalted blessings from Jesus Christ and his Father are secured to such by their fellow-christians' prayers. True religion does not abate civil respect, but gives a spiritual turn to the most dutiful and affectionate salutations. True faith in Christ always manifests itself in a cordial love to God and his people, and in a conscientious obedience to his law; and those only have the benefit of a special relation to Christ and his Father, who continue steadfast in the faith of the gospel, and persevere in all holy obedience. It is very dreadful, after a long profession of gospel truth, and much apparent experience of God's grace, to be at last disappointed of that ample satisfaction which we expected in that course. But inexpressible is their guilt who attempt to subvert any of the leading truths of the gospel. And highly sinful and dangerous is it to have fellowship with them, or to give them the smallest countenance in their conduct. Let protestants, let Britons, think and tremble.

EXPLANATORY NOTES.—Ver. 1, 2. My dear Gaius, whom God has loved with an everlasting love, and drawn with his loving-kindness, and whom I sincerely and heartily love as a true Christian, who faithfully adheres to the truths of the gospel in his profession and practice—I, who am now a very aged ruler of the Christian church, earnestly wish all manner of temporal prosperity and bodily health, as I have reason to believe that your soul prospers in an increase of spiritual knowledge, familiar fellowship with Christ, and delightful conformity to him, in a lively exercise of faith, hope, love, and new obedience. 3, 4. For I was exceedingly filled with joy and comfort, when some of those, who go about preaching the gospel, informed me of your remarkable experience of the power of Christ and his gospel truths, and with what faithfulness and integrity you profess, adhere to, and improve them, in a delightful, edifying, and progressive practice of holiness; for nothing gives me greater pleasure than to hear that those, who have been converted to Christ by my ministrations, continue steadfast in their holy profession of gospel truth, and more and more adorn it by a lively Christian conversation. 5—8. You act like a true believer, and a faithful follower of Jesus Christ, in your candid and disinterested benevolence to poor saints, particularly to such as are driven from their homes for their adherence to him, or go about preaching his gospel;—some of whom, being greatly affected with your distinguished kindness, made mention of it in our public worshipping assemblies.—And you cannot employ your substance better than in further assistance of such in carrying on their work, as an imitation of your kind and merciful God, and a token of your gratitude to him, for calling you, by his grace, to his kingdom and glory.—For to the honour of Christ and his gospel, and to manifest their entire disinterestedness in their labours to win souls, these ministers have freely preached the gospel to the Gentiles, refusing to accept of a necessary subsistence from their new converts; we ought therefore cheerfully to entertain them in our houses, and, according to our ability, supply them with necessaries; that we may thus assist them in the propagation of the glorious gospel, to the honour of Christ and the salvation of multitudes. 9, 10. I indeed wrote to your church to provide for such preachers; but Diotrephes, that proud ambitious man, who attempts to lord it over his hearers and fellow-ministers, refused my letter a public reading, or hindered the people's compliance with its contents: but, if the Lord will, I intend to visit you, expose his wicked conduct, and censure him for it; for he not only throws out a multitude of false and ill-natured reflections on me and other faithful ministers of Christ, and refuses to show any kindness to persecuted and travelling preachers, but does all he can to hinder such as have inclination or ability to supply them; and even pretends to excommunicate from the church, and deliver up to Satan, these afflicted brethren, if not also such as entertain them. 11. Dear friend, never make him, nor any other, your pattern in anything sinful; but, in imitation of Jesus Christ and his Father, exercise yourself in brotherly kindness, and in every other branch of holy conversation. For it is only those who do so that are the children of God and heirs of his kingdom. But they who indulge themselves in pride, hatred of brethren, or the like, have no spiritual knowledge of, nor fellowship with him.—12. Demetrius is a most excellent person, whom I, and all that regard either truth or the gospel, do and must speak well of. Let him, under Christ, be a pattern which you study to imitate.

REFLECTIONS.—Bodily health is an invaluable mercy when it enables us to improve our spiritual gifts and graces for the extensive benefit of mankind. And delightful is it when Christians remarkably increase and flourish in grace and good works; and when their faith and love to Christ, and his ministers and people, are such as cannot be kept secret.—Alas, what a plague to the church are proud, insolent, domineering imposers of their tenets, and malicious revilers of Christ's truths and faithful ministers, who will neither do good themselves, nor suffer others that would! Richly they deserve to be detested by every Christian, and exposed and censured by every church.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE FIRST, SECOND AND THIRD EPISTLES GENERAL OF JOHN.

The FIRST EPISTLE is peculiarly characterized by a pervading strain of love; God's love to sinners; the debt of love due by Christians in return; love to the Father necessarily begetting, in one child, love to all the members of the Father's family;—these are the topics upon which the apostle delights to expatiate, the peculiar prominence of which concurs with the record of the historian, in which it is stated, that, in his extreme old age, when unable to walk, he was accustomed to be carried into the Christian assembly at Ephesus, to look upon the people with the tenderness of a dying father; and that, being unable to read or preach, his custom was to summon up all his energies for one sentence—"Children, love one another!"

The SECOND EPISTLE is remarkable as affording a delightful specimen of primitive domestic Christianity, and as a record of the superabundant reward that pious mothers receive when their prayers and their instructions are blessed in the conversion of their families. The sisters appear to have been two widows—but the Lord was more than a husband to each, and more than a father to their fatherless children.

The THIRD EPISTLE is remarkable as pourtraying some striking varieties in the character of professing Christians. The features depicted are few; but, like the outline pencillings of some master-hand, they fully exhibit the peculiarities of the originals. Truth and hospitality stand personified in Gaius; ecclesiastical ambition and selfishness, in Diotrephes; while Demetrius stands forth one of those rare specimens of excellence in principle and manner that "win golden opinions from all men," while they sacrifice their truth and their consistency to none.—ED.

THE GENERAL EPISTLE

OF

J U D E.

THE author of this epistle was the brother of James, as all copies of the original testify. He is called in the gospel Judas, with the addition of his surname, Lebbeus, or Thaddeus, to distinguish him from Judas Iscariot. This epistle so nearly coincides with the second of Peter, that it would seem to have been written upon the same occasion, and, either after a conversation with Peter, or after the reading of his epistle, which Jude seems to quote. Within this short epistle there are references to Gen. iv. 5; v. 18; xix. 24; Num. xiv. 29; xvi. 1; xxii. 7—21; xxvi. 64; Deut. xxix. 23; Ezek. xiv. 7; Dan. x. 13; Zech. iii. 2, 4, 5.—ED.

JUDE,[a] the [b] servant of Jesus Christ, and brother of James, to them that are sanctified by God the Father, and preserved[*] in Jesus Christ, and called:

2 Mercy unto you, and peace, and love, be multiplied.

3 Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you, that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints.

4 For there are certain men crept in unawares, who were before of old ordained to this condemnation,[†] ungodly men, turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Lord God,[‡] and our Lord Jesus Christ.

5 I will therefore put you in remembrance,[§] though ye once knew this, how that the Lord, having saved the people out of the land of Egypt, afterward destroyed them that believed not.

6 And [c] the angels which kept not their first estate,[*] but left their own habitation,[†] he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day.

7 [d] Even as Sodom and Gomorrha, and the cities about them, in like manner, giving themselves over to fornication, and going after [e] strange flesh, [f] are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire.[‡]

8 [g] Likewise also these filthy dreamers defile the flesh, despise dominion, and speak evil of dignities.

9 Yet Michael the archangel, when contending with the devil, (he disputed about the body of Moses,) durst not bring against him a railing accusation, but said, The Lord rebuke thee.

10 But these speak evil of those things which they know not: but what they know naturally, as brute beasts, in those things they corrupt themselves.

EXPLANATORY NOTES.—Ver. 1. Judas, not Iscariot, but the brother of James the less, and kinsman of Jesus Christ according to the flesh, sent forth by his immediate commission to preach the gospel to those Jewish Christians who, in the judgment of charity, appear to have been set apart by God the Father, as his chosen in his eternal purpose of love, and in consequence thereof preserved in Christ from dying in their sins, and effectually called to partake of all the blessings of the gospel in time and eternity. 2. Wishes the most tender compassion and favour of a gracious God, and peace with him and with one another, and the best prosperity of every kind, and all the excellent fruits and rich manifestations of his special and distinguishing love in their utmost fulness. 3. My dear Christian brethren, when I, with much thought and care, applied myself to write somewhat to you concerning that spiritual and eternal salvation which answers the circumstances of every sinful man, and is offered in the gospel to all that hear it; and which all believers, Jews and Gentiles, share of: directed by the inspiring Spirit of God, I found it peculiarly necessary, with the utmost earnestness, to stir you up to the most fervent zeal, active diligence, and careful concern, to maintain, defend, and practise the pure and uncorrupted doctrines of the gospel, concerning the person, offices, righteousness, grace, and government of the Lord Christ, which have been by him, through his holy apostles, delivered to all his followers, who are holy in heart and life, as a trust and treasure to be by them faithfully kept, and fully and purely transmitted to posterity.—4. For according to the ancient purposes and predictions of God, there have clandestinely, by craft and flattery, crept in among you impious and heretical men, who, under pretence of embracing the Christian religion, represent the doctrines of God's grace as an encouragement to wanton and lascivious practices; and who, by their doctrine and conduct, plainly undermine the whole authority of God's law, and reject the gospel doctrine concerning the divine Person and offices of Christ, as the Prophet, Priest, and King of his church, and his gracious salvation of men from their sins to holiness and happiness. 5—7. To deter you from the smallest regard to, or compliance with, these seducers, seriously remember how your Hebrew ancestors, after God had miraculously delivered them from their Egyptian bondage, were almost every one of them cut off by terrible judgments in the wilderness for their disobedience and unbelief;—and how the highly dignified angels, who revolted from God by sin, were cast down into hell, and are, by the curse of his law, and their own wickedness and misery, reserved, like condemned and chained prisoners, till the last judgment; when their torments shall be completed, and they, with all apostates and impenitent unbelievers, shall depart into the most tremendous everlasting punishment!—And in what a fearful manner God, by fire and brimstone from heaven, destroyed the Sodomites and their neighbours of Gomorrha, Admah, and Zeboiim, for their unnatural lust, men with men; and set them and their country as an emblem of that everlasting destruction which is prepared for wicked angels and men. 8. In like manner, these profligate seducers delude themselves and others with their foolish and impure imaginations, indulge their fleshly lusts, and even pollute their bodies by unchaste dreams and lewd practices: and contemn, revile, and rail against all government and governors in church or state, so far as they tend to restrain their exorbitant vices. 9, 10. Yea, though Michael, that eminent chief of the holy angels, when disputing with the devil about the burial or concealment of the body of Moses from the Israelites, who would have 11 Wo unto them! for they have gone [h] in the way of Cain, and [i] ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and perished in [k] the gainsaying of Core.

12 [l] These are spots in your feasts of charity, when they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear: [m] clouds they are without water, carried about of winds; trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead,* plucked up by the roots;

13 [n] Raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame; wandering stars, [o] to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever.

readily worshipped it, did not venture to return the reviling and opprobrious language of that foul spirit, but solemnly left him to the righteous judgment of God, for his attempting to draw his people into the most flagrant sin against his divine majesty, crown, and dignity:—these daring pretenders fear not to vilify the most excellent things, civil or sacred, of the proper use, design, and benefit of which they are totally ignorant;—and even in such things as by the light of nature they cannot but know to be unlawful, they act as if they had no principle of reason to direct and govern them, and in a perverse, sensual, and brutal manner, debase themselves beneath human nature. 11. The most dreadful curses must therefore suddenly overtake them;—for, like Cain, they envy, hate, and are disposed to murder such as deserve their highest respect;—like Balaam, for the sake of worldly honour or wealth, they are ready to act the most treacherous, hypocritical, malicious, and destructive part against the people of God; or, like Korah and his companions, they set up themselves in the most daring manner against the governors whom God has appointed in church or state, and shall, in a most awful form, be at last swallowed up in everlasting flames. 12. They are a scandal, reproach, and an infectious defilement to your feasts, civil and sacred, while, fearless of guilt or punishment, they labour only to gratify their luxurious appetites;—and while they put on false appearances, as if they would be most refreshing, useful, and comforting to mankind, they are quite destitute of any real goodness; unstable as clouds, they are driven about by their own lusts and passions from one error and vice to another, and become more and more dead in sins, and hopeless of recovery. 13. In the most turbulent, pernicious, and noisy manner, they, to their own shame, throw out their furious reproaches and malicious slanders against the doctrines, ministers, and followers of Christ,—and their corrupt principles and vicious inclinations. Under all their pretences to be noted lights for the direction of others, themselves are utterly ignorant of real religion, and wander from the truth and holiness of the gospel, and run about spreading their wicked principles, temper, and courses, till at last they shall be plunged into the eternal horrors of that misery, despair, and damnation which God has prepared for them as their just punishment. 14, 15. It was partly with respect to such persons, that the famous Enoch foretold Christ's glorious coming, attended by his saints and angels, to the last judgment, —publicly to convince, expose, and condemn to eternal punishment, all ungodly persons, for their premeditated, malicious, and wicked deeds, and for their virulent speeches which they have thrown out against his person, gospel, and cause, and upon his members and faithful servants for his sake: 16. Which conduct exactly tallies with that of the seducers I am now warning you against;—for these secretly murmur against God and his providence, against magistrates and ministers, against Christ and his followers and ways, and are continually finding fault, and openly quarrelling with all his doctrines and dispensations, being quite dissatisfied with their own state and condition in the world,—and with restless minds are pursuing their own vicious inclinations to unlawful pleasures; and, at the same time, talking in lofty and unintelligible strains, and with high pretences to knowledge and religion, —speaking the most excessively vain and conceited things of themselves, and extravagantly flattering, caressing, and extolling such as are of their own party, however vile, especially if they be rich, or ready to grant them some worldly advantage, to gratify their covetous or luxurious temper. 17, 18. Now, my dearly beloved brethren in the Lord, beware of being stumbled at the rise of such seducers, or their scornful derisions of everything sacred, or their abandoned practices, since our Saviour and his apostles have given you such plain and express warnings of them. 19. For these are the very persons of whom you have been warned,—men that make factions and divisions in the church, alienating themselves from the true apostles, servants, disciples, and doctrines of Christ, and forming separate parties of their own sentiment, as if they were more holy than others;—whereas they are entirely governed by their animal appetites, lusts, and passions, and are entirely destitute of the enlightening, purifying, and sanctifying gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit. 20. But guarding against being misled by men of such corrupt principles and practices, persevere with integrity and faithfulness in your holy profession, and, by all proper and appointed means, endeavour to promote your own and your fellow-christians' spiritual establishment and advances in grace, holiness, and comfort, upon that foundation of faith which is laid in the doctrines of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner-stone; and upon that principle of faith in you which purifies the heart, works by love, overcomes the world, and derives all grace out of Christ's fulness, to enable you to grow up to all perfection in him, who is the head;—and continue habitually instant in prayer, under the direction and influence of the Holy Spirit to help your infirmities. 21. And thus constantly endeavour to approve yourselves to God, as those that sincerely and fervently love him, and delight to keep his commandments;—and in order hereunto, study to maintain a sweet and experimental sense of his special love to yourselves—looking, hoping, and longing, in a prepared state and frame, for the final manifestations, fruits, and effects of the grace and mercy of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, in that merciful sentence he shall then pass upon you, unto your complete deliverance from all sin and sorrow, and admission to all the blessings of eternal life. 22, 23. And in order to your own and others' edification in faith and holiness, great care and prudence must be used in dealing with such as have been seduced into any sin or error. Such as have been shaken or drawn aside through inadvertence, ignorance, and weakness, must be treated with great tenderness, meekness, condescension, endearing kindness, and compassionate concern, to recover and establish them.—Others that have gone farther lengths, and appear obstinate and hardened, must be more sharply dealt with; and their sin and danger must be set before them in the most alarming manner from the word of God, and needful censures be inflicted upon them;—in all which the utmost care must be taken to have no fellowship with them in their polluting courses. 24, 25. Now, to the Lord Jesus Christ, whose character I have represented as peculiarly suited to your encouragement and relief under your present troubles,—and who has almighty power originally in himself as God, and all official authority and qualifications as Mediator, and having graciously undertaken it, is as willing as able to preserve you from apostasy, and from irrecoverably stumbling into error or wickedness, and, after your state of warfare is accomplished, to present you to himself and his Father perfectly holy and unblemished, and completely accepted in his immediate presence, and glorified together with him in joy unspeakable, and amidst the triumphant and ecstatic joys of all the established angels and ransomed saints,—even to this God our Saviour, who, together with the Father and Spirit, is infinitely, originally, essentially, and communicatively, the only wise God,—be ascribed all the glory of his divine nature and attributes as God, and of all his love, grace, designs, undertakings, and performances, and all the grandeur of his heavenly majesty, as God-man Mediator,—together with universal rule and government, might, and authority over all persons and things in the kingdom of providence and of grace now, henceforth, and for evermore.

REFLECTIONS UPON JUDE.—It is an inexpressible honour to be a faithful servant of Christ; to be divinely chosen, united to, and preserved in Christ; and unbounded grace, mercy, and peace await such in time and eternity. With diligent care ought ministers to instruct their hearers concerning the salvation of their souls, indefinitely offered in the gospel, and bestowed on all that believe; and to stir them up to an earnest concern, steadfast adherence, and fervent zeal, for the truths of the gospel.—Impostors abound in every age, and dare to plead God's word and grace in favour of their vilest abominations. Yet, when warned by the fate of ancient Hebrews, fallen angels, filthy Sodomites, murderous Cain, hypocritical Balaam, and presumptuous Korah, what can such apostates expect less than the eternal damnation of hell! But no warnings, no good examples, avail with men hardened in desperate wickedness;—they will still rush forward in their impure, lustful, rebellious, insolent, reproachful, brutish, proud, fearless, discontented course; dishonouring God and seeking to please men, while they are plaguing his church. Great need then have Christians to regard the inspired warnings given against such, and to endeavour to make daily progress in knowledge, faith, fervent prayer, and holy love to Christ and his people, and in expectation of an eternal gracious reward. And with tender care, and holy, but prudent zeal, ought they to reclaim such as have been insnared. Infinite is the mercy, that in this insnaring world all the saints are in the hand, and under the care of Jesus Christ as their keeper, and that all their preservation, and happiness certainly redounds to his glory.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE GENERAL EPISTLE OF JUDE.

There is no doubt that the doctrines of the Gnostics and Nicolaitanes had early been propagated in the church of Christ, even as the tares were sown ere the wheat had budded. There can, therefore, be little doubt, that against their lewd and pernicious errors the terrible denunciations of Jude were directed;—denunciations that prove beyond a question, that while the "still small voice" of gospel grace is to be whispered into the ear of believers, "the terrors of the Lord," and "the curse of the law," are to be proclaimed with trumpet tongue against all the workers of iniquity.—Ed.

THE REVELATION

SAINT JOHN THE DIVINE.

This book contains the visions which the apostle John received in the desert isle of Patmos, to which the emperor Domitian had banished him, about A. D. 96. (1) After a preface and introductory vision of Christ, it contains seven doctrinal epistles to the seven churches of Proconsular Asia, which also contain warnings and directions to the church in every age; chap. i—iii. (2) After an introductory vision of an enthroned God and Redeemer, it represents the fate of the church, and of the world as connected with it, from the ascension of Christ till the end of time, under the emblems of seven seals of a book opened, the seventh of which introduces seven trumpets, and the seventh of which trumpets introduces seven vials for the destruction of Antichrist,—after which the glorious thousand years, the last judgment, and eternal state, take place; chap. iv—xxii. The series of the predictions is carried on in chap. vi, viii, ix, xi, xx.: and the other chapters are explanatory digressions. The first six seals represent the state of the church and Roman empire, from A. D. 33 to 323. The first six trumpets represent their fate from A. D. 338 to 1866, or 2016. The seventh trumpet extends from thence to the end of the world; in the beginning of which period the seven vials will be poured upon Antichrist.

[During the first two centuries of the Christian church this book was uniformly ascribed to John the apostle—commonly called The Divine—either on account of the deep things of God with which his writings abound, or because he wrote so much concerning the Divine Person of the Logos, or Word. The apostle was banished to Patmos, a small island in the Ægean sea, in the latter end of the reign of Domitian, A. D. 95 or 96; and Justin Martyr, who lived about sixty years later, speaks of him as the unquestioned author of the Apocalypse. Indeed, his authorship, and the apostolical authority of the book, were never questioned till the third century, when, certain opinions respecting the millennium having been deduced from it, the opponents of these opinions, as the most effectual mode of refutation, commenced to deny the canonical character of the book itself. This, however, though a ready, was a most illogical way to victory; for there is no book of Scripture that comes recommended to the church with stronger external or internal evidence. The references to the other Scriptures are very numerous, among which may be specially noted, Gen. ii. 9; Exod. iii. 14; Num. xxiv. 14; xxv. 1; xxxi. 16; 1 Kin. xvi. 31; xxi. 25; Is. i. 18; ii. 19—21; xxi. 9; xxii. 22; xxxiv. 10; xliv. 6; lv. 1, 2; lxiii. 2; lxv. 17; lxvi. 22; Jer. li. 7, 8; Ezek. i. 5, 26—28; iii. 3; xxxvii. 5, 9, 10, 14; xxxviii. 2, &c.; xl.; xlvii. 1—12; Dan. vii. 2—20; xii. 1—7; Zech. iv. 2, 11—14; vi. 2—8; xiii. 1.—Ed.]

EXPLANATORY NOTES. Chap. I.—Ver. 1. Christ, as Mediator, received this revelation from God; and he, by the ministry of angels, made it known to John. 4. Him who was, and is, and is to come, denotes the Father in his absolute eternity and unchangeableness. And when Christ is considered as God, much the same character is given to him, ver. 8, 11, 17. chap. xxii. 13. and xxi. 6.—The seven spirits denote the Holy Ghost in the diversity and perfect variety of his gifts, graces, and operations. 5. Christ, by his personal constitution, conduct, declarations, death, and ordinances, solemnly and infallibly bears faithful testimony of his Father's mind and will, and that he himself is the Son of God and promised Messiah. He first rose from the dead to immortal life, and rose by his 8 [c]I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith [d]the Lord, which is, and which was, and which is to come, [e]the Almighty.

9 I John, who also am [f]your brother, and companion in tribulation, and in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ, was in the isle that is called Patmos, for the word of God, and for the testimony of Jesus Christ.

10 I was [h]in the Spirit on [i]the Lord's day, and heard behind me a great voice, as of a trumpet, 11 Saying, [k]I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the last: and, What thou seest, write in a book, and send it unto [l]the seven churches which are in Asia; unto Ephesus, and unto Smyrna, and unto Pergamos, and unto Thyatira, and unto Sardis, and unto Philadelphia, and unto Laodicea.

12 And [m]I turned to see the voice† that spake with me. And, being turned, I saw [n]seven golden candlesticks;

13 And [o]in the midst of the seven candlesticks one like unto [p]the Son of man, clothed with [q]a garment down to the foot, and [r]girt about the paps with a golden girdle.

14 [s]His head and his hairs were white like wool, as white as snow; and his eyes were [t]as a flame of fire;

15 And his feet like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace; and [u]his voice as the sound of many waters.

16 And he had in his right hand seven stars: and out of his mouth went a sharp two-edged sword: and his countenance was as the sun shineth in his strength.*

17 And when I saw him, I fell at his feet as dead: and he laid his right hand upon me, saying unto me, Fear not; I am the first and the last:

18 I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death.

19 Write† the things which thou hast seen, and the things which are, and the things which shall be hereafter;

20 The mystery of the seven stars which thou sawest in my right hand, and the seven golden candlesticks. The seven stars are the angels of the seven churches: and the seven candlesticks which thou sawest are the seven churches.‡

* It is worthy of remark that in this portrait of our Lord there is not one single feature capable of being painted.—Gold, snow, flame, glowing brass, stars, the sun in his strength, are, some of them in a degree, and others altogether, beyond the power of imitation. The portrait is sublime beyond comparison—an idolatrous image impossible. See Ezek. 8. 2. Dan. 7. 9. & 10. 6.—Ed.

† "Write, therefore," &c. is the true rendering of the original. Why "therefore" was omitted by the translators does not appear; but, most probably, from an early error of the press.—Ed.

‡ The seven candlesticks are the seven churches.—By comparing these words with the parallel phrase, "This is my body" (Mat. 26. 26), the unfounded nature of the Romish figment of transubstantiation will be evident. The "seven candlesticks" are but emblems of "the seven churches."—Ed.

own power, as the head of his elect body, and as the cause, pattern, pledge, and first-fruits of their resurrection;—and, as a reward of his atoning death, he is exalted to his Father's right hand, with all fulness of authority and dominion, and to be head of all principalities and powers on earth as well as in heaven, for the preservation, conversion, and government of his people, and for the restraining and subduing all his and their enemies. 6. Saints are kings, who, under Christ, have power to prevail with God in prayer, are heirs of the kingdom of glory, are enabled to govern their own spirits, and to overcome sin, Satan, and the world; and are priests sanctified to God's service, who have near access to him, and offer up themselves and their good works as spiritual sacrifices of gratitude, acceptable to him by Jesus Christ. 9. I am your brother in the faith and in the family of God,—a fellow-sufferer for the sake of Christ, his gospel, and cause, and fellow-heir of his kingdom of grace and glory: and through his gracious assistance am patiently enduring my sufferings, and quietly waiting for my glorious crown. 10. On the first day of the week, which is divinely appointed to commemorate the resurrection of our Lord Jesus, I was in a spiritual frame, employed in religious meditations and exercises, and the Spirit of prophecy came upon me. 12—16. The seven golden candlesticks represent the Christian churches, particularly those of proconsular Asia, in that light of doctrine, holiness and comfort, which they receive from Christ, and hold forth to others. The Son of man walking in the midst of them, is Jesus the true Messiah, taking pleasure to observe, preserve, govern, and furnish them with everything needful: His garment down to the foot represents his mediatorial office, and his righteousness as our Surety, which covers him and all his people: His white hairs denote his divine majesty and glory, and that he is from everlasting, and perfectly holy. His eyes like a flame of fire denote his penetrating wisdom and knowledge, and his influence to discover the secrets of all hearts, and to purify and refine, or terribly consume them, as he pleases: His feet like burning brass, represent the strength, steadiness, purity, and beauty of all his personal conduct or providential dispensations, to the joy of his saints and terror of his enemies: His voice as the sound of many waters denotes his word and providence, powerful to convert and comfort his people, but dreadful, astonishing, and destructive to the wicked. The stars in his right hand denote gospel ministers, who, by their example and instruction, communicate light to the world, as framed, furnished, supported, directed, and governed by him: The sharp two-edged sword which goeth out of his mouth, represents the justice of his government; and his word, law, and gospel, rendered efficacious for cutting sinners to the heart, cutting off corruptions from believers, and for cutting down his implacable enemies: His countenance like the shining sun denotes the manifestations of his infinitely pure and glorious person, character, fulness, and work, for the enlightening, reviving, comforting, and fructifying of his church in heaven and earth. 18. His having the keys of death and hell denote his power to raise the dead, and to render men happy or miserable in the other world as he pleases.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—Whatever revelation Christ makes from his Father is infinitely worthy of our most serious and humble study and religious regard. And however dark some circumstances of it may appear, an humble inquiry into it will profit our souls; and all of it shall be accomplished in due season. Rich are the blessings of grace which proceed from Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, to all the churches and saints; and glorious and honoured are they who by Jesus' love are washed from the guilt, dominion, and filth of their sins in his blood, and made kings and priests to him and his Father. But terrible is the condition, and dreadful the sentence and fate, of Jesus' enemies, his people's persecutors, and of all earthly-minded men, when he appears in his majesty and glory to the last judgment! With great terror they shall then behold him; and with anguish bewail their neglect of, and rebellion against him. In this world ministers and saints must expect to be fellow-sharers in trouble and persecution for their adherence to Christ; but spiritual fellowship with him, particularly on the Lord's day, can sufficiently sweeten them, however bitter. If he, the living Redeemer, the author and finisher of all the dispensations of providence and grace, manifests himself as an almighty and all-seeing Lord, walking in his churches to take care of the faithful,—as enlightening and assisting ministers, and as fighting against his and his people's enemies,—as the risen Saviour, and living and exalted Ruler of the unseen world, it may sufficiently encourage and enable us to bear all with calm submission and sweet composure.

CHAP. II.—In these seven epistles observe, (1) Christ always describes himself in the introduction by a character suited to the case of that particular church to which the letter is directed, whether for encouragement or terror. (2) He directs them all to the Angel or Messenger of the church, that is the pastors, represented as one, because of the unity and sameness of their office and work; and yet sometimes as more than one; ver. 10, 25—because they are his mouth to their people. (3) The churches of Ephesus, Pergamos, Thyatira, and Sardis, are commended for some things, and reproved for others; the churches of Smyrna and Philadelphia only commended; and the church of Laodicea only reproved. (4) Each of the epistles is concluded with a delightful promise of eternal glory and happiness to victorious believers:—A solemn call to every reader or hearer seriously to attend to and apply the epistles to his own conscience. Ver. 2. I am acquainted with, and approve your manifold works of righteousness, and the pains you have taken to maintain and propagate my pure gospel and the interests of my kingdom,

3 [d]And hast borne, and hast patience, and for my name's sake hast laboured, and hast not fainted.

4 Nevertheless I have somewhat against thee, because [e]thou hast left[e] thy first love.

5 [f]Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the first works; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and [g]will remove thy candlestick[†] out of his place, except thou repent.

6 But this thou hast, that thou hatest the deeds of the Nicolaitanes,[‡] which I also hate.

7 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God.

8 And unto the angel of the church in Smyrna[§] write; These things saith the first and the last, which was dead, and is alive;

9 I know thy works, and tribulation, and poverty, (but thou art rich,) and I know the blasphemy of them which say they are Jews, and are not, but are the synagogue of Satan.

10 Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer: behold, the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried; and ye shall have tribulation ten days: be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.

11 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death.

12 And to the angel of the church in Pergamos[‖] write; These things saith he which hath the sharp sword with two edges;

13 I know thy works, and where thou dwellest, even where Satan's seat is:[•] and thou holdest fast my name, and hast not denied my faith, even in those days wherein Antipas[†] was my faithful martyr, who was slain among you, where Satan dwelleth.

14 But I have a few things against thee, because thou hast there them that hold the doctrine of Balaam, who taught Balac to cast a stumblingblock before the children of Israel, to eat things sacrificed unto idols, and to commit fornication.

15 So hast thou also them that hold the doctrine of the Nicolaitanes, which thing I hate.

16 Repent; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will fight against them with the sword of my mouth.

17 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna,[*] and will give him a white stone,[†] and in the stone a new name[‡] written, which no man knoweth, saving he that receiveth it.[§]

18 And unto the angel of the church in Thyatira[‖] write; These things saith the Son of God, who hath his eyes like unto a flame of fire, and his feet are like fine brass;

19 I know thy works, and charity, and service, and faith, and thy patience, and thy works; and the last to be more than the first.

20 Notwithstanding I have a few things against thee, because thou sufferest that woman Jezebel,[•] which calleth herself a prophetess, to teach and to seduce my servants to commit fornication, and to eat things sacrificed unto idols.

21 And I gave her space to repent of her fornication; and she repented not.

22 Behold, I will cast her into a bed, and them that commit adultery with her into great tribulation, except they repent of their deeds.

23 And I will kill her children with death; and all the churches shall know that I am he which searcheth the reins and hearts: and I will give unto every one of you according to your works.

24 But unto you I say, and unto the rest in Thyatira, as many as have not this doctrine, and which have not known the depths of Satan, as they speak, I will put upon you none other burden:

25 But that which ye have already hold fast till I come.

This denunciation began to be fulfilled during the persecutions of the Roman emperors Decius, Gallus, and Valerian, and was completed to the letter by the Saracens and Turks. It is now a total ruin, without a solitary inhabitant.—Ko.

‡ The Nicolaitanes—a branch of the Gnostics, taught that Christ's divine nature descended upon him at his baptism, and ascended at his crucifixion; held that it was lawful to eat meats offered to idols—inculcated celibacy, but tolerated fornication.—Ko.

§ Smyrna was not, like Ephesus, threatened with destruction; and Smyrna still survives. "Ten times" destroyed, by enemies or earthquakes, and often swept over by the plague, "ten times" did the city rise from its ruins with increased splendour. Its population is still above 100,000; of whom 30,000 are Greek, and 7,000 Armenian Christians, and 10,000 Jews, the remainder Turks. † A white stone, has been explained by a supposed reference to the white and black stones given in Grecian and Roman trials and elections, the one to denote acquittal or approval; the other, condemnation or rejection; also by a like supposed reference to the white stones given as evidences of victory at the Olympic games. But surely nothing is more unlikely than that a prophet of the Lord should borrow his imagery from heathenism! Is it not much more natural to understand it as a reference to the "bright, shining, light-giving" stones, (for so the word λευκὸς signifies, as well as "white") which, by the command of the Lord, Moses placed upon the shoulders and breast of Aaron. Ex. 28. 10, 11.—Ko.

‡ A new name, has been explained by a supposed reference to the Roman tesseræ hospitales, given as tokens of friendship and alliance. But, as in the case of the "white stone," it is to be explained, not by a reference to a local heathen custom, but by the engraving of the names of the tribes on the stones upon the shoulders and breast of the high priest. Ex. 28. 10, 11.—Ko.

§ No man knoweth saving he that receiveth it—the nature and value of that "new name" (child of God) which the Lord bestows upon all who love him. See Gen. 32. 28. 1 John 3. 1.—Ko.

‖ Thyatira, now called Akhisar, about fifty miles south-east of Pergamos, contains about 1000 houses.—Ko.

• Jezebel cannot, from the nature of the description, signify any individual, but is an emblematic name for those agents of antichrist by whom the primitive church was so early tried (see 1 John 2. 18), and who have perfected their system in Romanism, which assumes to be an infallible instructress, patronizes idolatry, which is spiritual fornication, and, like Jezebel the wife of Ahab, teaches the kings of the earth to trample upon liberty of conscience, and establish despotism over life and property.—Ko.

and with your holy prudent zeal, that sin and error, and scandalous and erroneous persons, may be kept or put out of your church fellowship; with the strict trials you have made of the principles and manners of such as pretend an apostolic commission from me; 3. And that you have, with holy fortitude, constancy, and patient resignation to the will of God, borne up against all the opposition of false teachers, and under manifold persecutions for my sake;—and, from a principle of love to me and my cause, have, without fainting or discouragement under your trials, persisted in diligently applying yourselves to promote my glory in the world. 4. Nevertheless I must sharply reprove you, that of late your affection to me, my people and cause, has become less fervent than when you were first converted to the faith. 5. Think, therefore, seriously and impartially, on your shameful declensions and revolts from your former love and zeal, and how much of the purity, pleasure, and life of religion you have lost by them; and with grief and hatred of them return to your wonted lively exercise of faith, love, and obedience; otherwise I will quickly take away all your gospel privileges, and dissolve your church, that you shall no longer enjoy or hold forth the light of gospel truth, holiness, and comfort. 6. The Nicolaitanes, under a pretence of Christian freedom, encouraged men to idolatry, uncleanness, or such like wickedness. 7. To every one, who, united to my person, and depending on my grace, perseveres in mortifying his own corruptions, and resisting the temptations of Satan and the world, will I freely grant all the benefits of my purchase, in the sublime, substantial, and never-failing honours and delights of the heavenly state; in which God himself dwells, and is immediately enjoyed in the most glorious manner. 9. Job xix. 3; Eccl. vii. 19; or a few days, Gen. xxiv. 55. Lev. xxvi. 26; Amos v. 3; and vi. 9, 11. The second death is eternal destruction in hell. 16. Unless you quickly repent of your conduct, I will, by fearful judgments, cut off these bold offenders. 17. I will make those who believe and overcome partakers of all the reviving blessings of spiritual and eternal life, which are safely treasured up in Christ, and unknown to carnal men; and give them the most delightful sense of their full justification and adoption. 22, 23. I will inflict dreadful calamities upon your corrupt seducers, and those seduced by them, so as to alarm all the churches around, and to make them know that no pretences to knowledge or piety can hide any wicked principles or evil practices from me. 24, 25. Such of you as have never approved, but faithfully opposed, these diabolical delusions and mysteries of iniquity, which these seducers propagate with the deepest intrigue and subtlety, and boast of, as the product of profound knowledge and wisdom, I only require to persevere in your opposition, and to hold fast the doctrines and precepts which ye have received in my word,—in the continued

It did not fall, like the other cities of Asia, as a feeble and unresisting prey into the hands of the Mahommedan conquerors; but, as the infidel Gibbon expresses it, "either sustained by prophecy or the valour of its inhabitants, obtained an honourable capitulation from the proudest of the Ottomans; and in the midst of surrounding desolation "still remains erect, a column in the midst of ruins." ‡ He shall go no more out, seems an incongruous metaphor when applied to a fixed pillar. But its strict propriety will appear when it is recollected that the pillars of the temple at Jerusalem were carried away to Babylon (2 Kin. 25. 13. Jer. 52. 17), and that this promise implies perpetual protection from spiritual captivity.—Ed.

7 [i]And to the angel of the church in Philadelphia† write; These things saith [k]he that is holy, he that is true, he that hath [l]the key of David, he that openeth, and no man shutteth; and shutteth, and no man openeth;

8 I know thy works: behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it: for thou hast a little strength, and hast kept my word, and hast not denied my name.

9 Behold, I will make them of the synagogue of Satan, which say they are Jews, and are not, but do lie; behold, I will make them to come and worship before thy feet, and to know that I have loved thee.

10 Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth.

11 Behold, I come quickly: hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown.

exercise of faith, love, and holy obedience. 26—28. Such as stand their ground against temptations, and persevere in faith and holiness to the end, I will make to share in my conquests and glorious dominion over the world, and my victory over mine enemies, and will give them all that light and grace, those comforts, enjoyments, and glories, that are to be found in myself as their everlasting portion.

Reflections upon Chap. II.—No churches on earth are without their defilements and weaknesses; few without some glaring iniquities, or even without some wicked seducers. And it is a mercy that Jesus Christ, for their benefit, communicates to both pastors and people his reproofs, warnings, directions, and encouragements. His characters, as well as his oracles, exactly answer their case. And he has a critical and divine acquaintance with them and all their concerns. He takes the first and kindest notice of their graces, services, and sufferings for his sake, and how they oppose what is evil, and perform what is good. Graciously he dwells among them, supports, furnishes, and directs their ministers; begins and perfects all that concerns them in time or eternity; and lives for them as their risen and exalted Redeemer. With tender compassion he reminds them of their declensions and irregularities, and calls them to repentance and reformation. And his promises are very encouraging to his ministers and people, who faithfully wrestle against every known sin in themselves or others. Spiritual and heavenly are the delights he now bestows upon them; sure is their security from eternal damnation; and infinite is the glory, acceptance, pleasure, fame, illustrious excellency and power over every opposer, to which he will at last exalt them.—But awful are his threatenings, and tremendous his judgments, upon impostors, hypocritical professors, and obstinate sinners! No boast of deep or devilish understanding, no power in deceiving his people, or in persecuting his servants, shall be able to screen them from his righteous and destructive judgments. Let then every soul hear and fear, and do no more so wickedly.

Chap. III.—Ver. 1. Though men think and speak of you as true and lively saints, I know that many of you are mere hypocrites, still dead in trespasses and sins; and others of you are grown very dead, dull, and lifeless, in the frame of your hearts, and the manner of performing religious duties, especially in secret. 2. Guard against such an insensible temper; and, depending on me, who have all the influences of the Holy Ghost to bestow, make use of all means of grace for adding strength and vigour to the small remains of those good things which are among you, and which are on the very point of expiring; for by my perfect knowledge of your hearts and ways, I find your performances cannot be accepted by God. 3. As ever you would make a right judgment of your state, seriously reflect on my doctrines and laws; and whether you at first received them into your heart in faith and love, or only with some flight of affection. And so far as you received them aright, hold them fast, and carefully act up to them; and if you received them only in a notional and hypocritical manner, bewail your ruinous mistake, and never rest satisfied till God rectify it by his almighty influences; for if you continue unconcerned, my destructive judgments shall suddenly and unexpectedly break forth upon you. 4, 5. There are, indeed, a few eminent Christians among you, who have kept themselves clear of errors and immoralities, and have maintained their integrity, sound in the faith, and lively in their practice. They being accepted in my righteousness, and sanctified by my Spirit, shall live eternally with me, in the most delightful, holy, and honourable fellowship; and they, and all others who overcome sin and Satan, shall, in the most public and honourable manner, be acknowledged by me as my peculiar favourites, before God, angels, and men. 7. Christ is holy in his natures, offices, and works, and the author of all the holiness in his people. He is invariably truth in himself, he is infallibly true in his declarations, threatenings, and promises, and is the truth and substance of the ancient types and predictions; and he has the government of the church and world upon his shoulders, and the full and uncontrollable power of life and death, hell and heaven, in his hand. 8. I have given you free access to my gospel, and opened your hearts to receive it; nor can either devils or men defeat my favour. And though not eminent in light, grace, and holiness, ye are truly sincere in them, and have faithfully maintained my doctrines, laws, and institutions. 9. I will make even those Jewish seducers and their followers, who are devoted to the service and worship of Satan, humbly to confess their errors to you, and receive your instructions or censures, and acknowledge my peculiar favours to you. 10. Since in obedience to my commands and after my example, you have patiently endured persecution for your adherence to my gospel truths, which, in the exercise of my patience, are continued in the world, particularly to such of them as were peculiarly opposed, I will infallibly preserve you from apostasy in the still more trying days of trouble and affliction, which will come for the trial of all professed Christians throughout the whole Roman empire. 11. But as I will come quickly to deliver you and the rest of my people from all their enemies, see that ye, in dependence on my promised grace, hold fast, with the utmost care and constancy, zeal, and holy resolution, the doctrine which ye have received; the work of grace wrought in you, or done by you; and your bold profession of my name; that none, through subtlety or violence, may ever pervert you, and rob you of the honours and eternal glories promised to the faithful, or even outshine you in anything truly excellent. 12. Those who by faith overcome temptations and inward corruptions, shall be immovably fixed in the state of heavenly glory in the presence of God, and consecrated to his service; and shall be openly acknowledged and manifested as chil-

15 I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou wert cold or hot.[§]

16 So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth.

17 Because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked:

18 I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eye-salve, that thou mayest see.

19 As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: be zealous therefore, and repent.

20 Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me.

21 To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne.

[p] Col. 1. 15—18.

[§] I would thou wert cold or hot, seems a wish inconsistent with the character of the speaker. "Cold," therefore, Woodhouse interprets "not of pers. ns devoid of all warm feelings and affections, but who, having their passions absorbed by worldly objects, have hitherto been cold to religious affections; but of whom there is hope that, from experience of the vanity of mere worldly pursuits, they may listen to the suggestions of the Spirit, and turn their affections to God." And this case Bloomfield supposes to be exemplified in the irreligious publicans who entered the kingdom of heaven before the moral Pharisees. But might not the difficulty be better removed by understanding ὄφελον, not as an indeclinable particle signifying "I would," "I wish," but as the neuter participle of the 2nd Aor., and translating it by the Latin "necesse est," by the English "ye must," &c.—"Ye cannot long remain indifferent?" comp. [a] Ch. 1—iii.

[*] After this.—Literally, "after these things," that is, after the vision, ch. 1. 10—20, and the messages, ch. 2. & 3.—Ed.

[†] And the first voice.—Rather, "And the voice, the first which I had heard," to wit, in ch. 1. 10.—Ed.

[‡] The jasper was the symbol of Naphtali, (comp. Ex. 28. 20, with Num. 2. 29). The sardine was the emblem of Judah, the first tribe, while Naphtali was the last in the Mosaic camp (comp. Ex. 28. 17. with Num. 2. 3). The amethyst was the emblem of Benjamin (comp. Ex. 28. 19, with Num. 2. 22); and the emerald the emblem of Reuben (comp. Ex. 28. 19, with Num. 2. 10). Now the jasper being interpreted by "Naphtali," signifies "the fighting" of the enlightened one against his enemies. The sardine, being interpreted by "Judah," signifies "the praise of the Lord" about to be proclaimed. The amethyst, being interpreted by "Benjamin," signifies "the son of the right hand;" and the emerald, being interpreted by "Reuben," signifies "a vision of the Son." All which things seem exactly descriptive of the exalted Saviour, who appears crowned with a rainbow diadem, the emblem of the covenant of promise, of the curse reversed, of a world baptized and renovated, and guaranteed by its Creator against any return of destruction.—Note. This view, though unsupported by the authority of Expositors, is humbly submitted as apparently coincident with the nature of Scripture emblems, and authorized by the interpretation of Scripture names. See, for example, Heb. 7. 2.—Ed.

AFTER [*]this I looked, and, behold, a door was opened in heaven: and the first voice[†] which I heard was as it were of a trumpet talking with me; which said, Come up hither, and I will show thee things which must be hereafter.

2 And immediately I was in the Spirit: and, behold, a throne was set in heaven, and one sat on the throne.

3 And he that sat was to look upon like a jasper[‡] and a sardine stone: and there was a rainbow round about the throne, in sight like unto an emerald.

4 And round about the throne were four and twenty seats: and upon the seats I saw four and twenty elders sitting, clothed in white raiment; and they had on their heads crowns of gold.

5 And out of the throne proceeded lightnings, and thunderings, and voices: and there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are the seven Spirits of God.

6 And before the throne there was a sea of glass like unto crystal: and in the midst of the throne, and round about the throne, were four beasts full of eyes before and behind.

7 And the first beast was like a lion, and the second beast like a calf, and the third beast had a face as a man, and the fourth beast was like a flying eagle.

8 And the four beasts had each of them six wings about him; and they were full of eyes within: and they rest not day and night, say-

dren and heirs of God, rightful citizens of the heavenly state; and as united to, justified in, and adopted by me as their Head and Saviour. 14. Christ is truth itself, and infallibly true in his testimony concerning persons or things;—and as the Origin, Author, Prince, and Ruler of all creatures in heaven and earth, he is able to perform whatever he promises or threatens. 15, 16. If, to my great dissatisfaction, you continue thus formally professing my name and truth, and disgracing it by your careless indifference, and want of hearty affection to, and zeal for it, I will, with abhorrence, dissolve your church, and destroy you. 17, 18. Because ye vainly imagine and boast that ye are rich in spiritual gifts and graces, and in everything pertaining to life and godliness, and have no proper sense of your destitute, miserable, dangerous, ignorant, unrighteous, and unholy state and condition, I earnestly and compassionately beseech you, freely, but deliberately, to receive me, and my fulness of grace and glory, as your enriching portion and treasure, my imputed righteousness and imparted holiness to cover and adorn you, and my Spirit and word to enlighten and render you wise unto salvation. 19, 20. As, in the most tender affection, I warn, reprove, and correct all my favourites when they do amiss, see that you speedily improve my present rebukes in an earnest and thorough repentance of your conduct, and a turning from it.—Behold, in amazing patience, condescension, and kindness, by the declarations and calls of my word, the strivings of my Spirit, and the engaging or awakening dispensations of my providence, I stand knocking at the door of your hearts; whoever by faith receives me, his soul shall be filled with my Spirit and grace, and he shall live, and hereafter enjoy the most delightful fellowship with, and communications from me.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—Very different are the conditions of churches and Christians on earth. But, alas! most of them are generally corrupt. While a few are sincere, faithful, and thriving, many have a form of godliness without the power of it,—and many are altogether lukewarm, self-conceited, and insensible of their manifold spiritual maladies. But there is no case on earth to which Christ's character and word are not suitable. He takes notice of the faithfulness, the labours, the little strength, of such as are lively and upright. Kindly he affords them opportunities for the spread of the gospel, and of familiar fellowship with himself. Graciously he reduces their enemies to their honour, and preserves them in times of trial. And great are the heavenly glories and priestly honours, and high the seats on his throne, which at the last judgment, or in the eternal state, he bestows upon them. But detestable to him are hypocritical, lukewarm, and self-conceited professors. Yea, they are in danger of the most indignant rejection, and most sudden and unexpected destruction. How transcendent is his mercy, so kindly, so earnestly, to call such to serious consideration and gospel repentance, and to offer them freely himself, and his righteousness, his word, his Spirit, and grace, and the most full, familiar, and eternal fellowship with himself and his Father! And wonderful is his forbearance, that he should so long continue knocking at the door of their heart by gospel calls, strivings of his Spirit, and dispensations of his providence.—My soul, while thou hast an ear, hear what the Spirit saith to the churches, and apply all faithfully to thyself.

CHAP. IV.—Ver. 3. God's being like the whitish transparent jasper denotes his infinite holiness and glory; the marvellously-mingled display of his perfections in his works of providence and grace; and his gracious regard to his people. His likeness to the bloody-coloured sardine denotes his justice and fiery indignation against his enemies. The greenish rainbow round about the throne represents the covenant of grace as ever in God's eye, and the perpetual rule of all that he does in the government of the world or the church. 4. The twenty-four crowned elders, represent the saints of the Old and New Testaments enjoying fixed and familiar fellowship with God by virtue of the covenant of grace; and they are called twenty-four, in allusion to the courses of the Hebrew priests; or the twelve patriarchs of the Jewish church, and twelve apostolic founders of the Christian. 5. The seven lamps of fire before the throne represent the Holy Ghost in the variety and perfection of his gifts and graces, which he distributes for enlightening, purifying, and warming the souls of his ministers and people. 6. The clear sea of glass before the throne is Jesus' blood, in which all the redeemed worshippers must be washed from their iniquities. 6—8. The four living creatures, full of eyes before, behind, and within, denote gospel ministers, sent to preach the gospel to all the ends of the earth, remarkable for spiritual knowledge, prudence, and exact observation and attention to receive direction and influences from God, and to watch over and feed their people, and to look well into, and keep their own hearts. Their having six wings each denotes their readiness, alacrity, and diligence, in their work. Their being likened to lions, oxen, men, eagles, denotes their undaunted boldness and courage; patience and fitness for labour; wisdom, prudence, and compassion; deep penetration into the mysteries of God; sublime sentiments and devotion; together with their eminent zeal, activity, and vigour, in the service of God. 10. The elders falling down and casting their crowns before the throne, denotes their deep humility, holy reverence, and profound adoration; and their professing themselves unworthy of any honour in God's presence, and that all their honour proceeds from him.

Reflections upon Chap. IV.—Great is the mercy that an abundant entrance into heaven is opened, by Jesus' blood, for every one washed in it. Happy are they who, directed and drawn by the Holy Ghost, now enter by faith as a pledge and earnest of their personal admission hereafter! With what awful majesty and grandeur, new covenant faithfulness and grace towards his people, and just terribleness to his enemies, nay, with all-adorable perfections, does God manifest himself on his imperial throne! Yea, high are the honours to which his servants and people are exalted in connexion with him; and profound their holy reverence, and cordial their adoration of him. Faithful ministers ought to be filled with spiritual knowledge; and should be prudent, vigilant, courageous, laborious, compassionate, and active, in the discharge of their office, and in the exercise of their gifts and graces, under the direction and assistance of the Holy Ghost. With diligent care should they lead the religion and worship of the churches, and unweariedly ascribe to God alone all the glories of Godhead, and of the works of creation, providence, and redemption.

Chap. V.—Ver. 5. Sprung from the tribe of Judah, Jesus Christ is like a lion for strength, courage, and eminence, to maintain and defend his own property and tear asunder his enemies; and he is the Root of David, as in his divine nature, office, and character, he is the foundation and source of all the happiness and glory of his kingdom, typified by that of David. 6. His being represented as a slain Lamb, denotes him as an atoning Priest, the sacrifice for the sins of his people, and the food of their souls. His seven horns represent his full authority and almighty power, as a King to execute God's will, protecting and supporting his church, and pushing down their enemies. His seven eyes denote his infinite wisdom and knowledge, and his unmeasurable fulness of the Holy Ghost in all his gifts and graces, and his disposing of them to men, as the Prophet of his church. 8. Their harps denote the melody of their hearts, and the charming notes of their praise. Their golden vials, cups, or censers, full of odours, are their prayers, proceeding from sanctified hearts, and acceptable to God through Christ's merits and intercession.

Reflections upon Chap. V.—The events of providence, and the manifestations of God's favour, have and will take place in their orderly course. And it is a privilege and pleasure to have a proper acquaintance with the purposes of God here, to support us under our trials, till our happiness be perfected in eternal salvation. Very incapable are created beings to penetrate into them; and it is highly daring to pretend or attempt it. But comfortable is it to reflect, that our promised Messiah has interposed between his Father and his church, and has applied himself to manifest and fulfil them. Transcendently wonderful and glorious is his person and character: at once infinitely majestic, awful, and mighty: and yet endearingly meek, and marked with an atoning death for our sins! Extensive are his power and authority, his wisdom and knowledge; and unbounded his fulness of the Holy Ghost, and his power of sending him to men. And ministers, saints, and even angels, delightfully triumph in, and praise him for his work of redemption, equally as his Father. God forbid that my soul should be silent, when so many are engaged in his praise.

Chap. VI.—Ver. 1. These opened seals represent the fate of the Roman empire, but chiefly of the Christian church; and as they relate to events rather than periods, we must not imagine, that what was signified by one was altogether finished when that which was signified by the next following began. 2 And I saw, and behold a white horse:* and he that sat on him had a bow;† and a crown was given unto him: and he went forth conquering, and to conquer.‡

3 And when he had opened the second seal, I heard the second beast say, Come and see.

4 And there went out another horse that was red:§ and power was given to him that sat thereon to take peace from the earth, and that they should kill one another: and there was given unto him a great sword.

5 And when he had opened the third seal, I heard the third beast say, Come and see. And I beheld, and lo a black‖ horse; and he that sat on him had a pair of balances in his hand.

6 And I heard a voice in the midst of the four beasts say, A measure of wheat for a penny, and three measures of barley for a penny; and see thou hurt not the oil and the wine.

7 And when he had opened the fourth seal, I heard the voice of the fourth beast say, Come and see.

8 And I looked, and behold a pale* horse; and his name that sat on him was Death,† and hell followed with him: and power was given unto them over the fourth part of the earth, to kill with sword, and with hunger, and with death, and with the beasts‡ of the earth.

9 And when he had opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held:

10 And they cried with a loud voice, saying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?

11 And white robes were given unto every one of them; and it was said unto them, that they should rest yet for a little season, until their fellow-servants also and their brethren, that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled.*

12 And I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal, and, lo, there was a great earthquake;† and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood;

13 And the stars of heaven‡ fell unto the earth, even as a fig-tree casteth her § untimely figs, when she is shaken of a mighty wind:

14 And the heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together; [c]and every mountain‖ and island* were moved out of their places:

15 [d]And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bond man, and every free man, hid themselves in the dens, and in the rocks of the mountains;

16 *And said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb:

17 For the great day of his wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand?

And is not the second rider the persecuting Roman empire, which became so soon "red" with the blood of the saints, which, transformed into the papacy, bounded the crusaders against the unoffending Waldenses, established the unhallowed inquisition, persecuted to the death so many of the blessed Protestant Reformers, and, though providentially restrained, still continues to cherish the same spirit of relentless intolerance. white horse and his rider, ver. 2. may have some respect to the Roman victories gained by Vespasian, about A. D. 70, and Trajan, A. D. 110, under the providential direction of Christ, they chiefly represent Christ, as by the gospel, and the influences of the Holy Ghost attending it, conquering the nations to the obedience of faith, A. D. 33—66. and afterwards.—The red horse and his sword-bearing rider, ver. 4. represent the persecutions of the Christian church by the emperors Nero, Domitian, Trajan, and Adrian, between A. D. 66 and 138: and the terrible bloodshed in the Roman empire in the Jewish, Parthian, and other wars. The black horse and his rider with a pair of balances, 5, 6. may represent the church as corrupted with manifold errors, through which, and the more apparently legal persecutions of Aurelius about A. D. 160, and Severus, about 202, was occasioned no small scarcity of pure gospel ordinances. To punish which, the Lord plagued the Roman empire with terrible famines during the reigns of the two Antonines and Severus, about A. D. 140, 162, 200.—The pale horse with death and hell for his riders, represent the church as awfully corrupted with error and apostasy, and her members dreadfully murdered in the persecutions by Maximin, 235, Valerian, 256, Aurelian, 272, and especially by Decius, 250, and the just punishment thereof on the Roman empire in the terrible tyranny of their emperors between 235 and 284, and their frequent murdering one of another;—the desolating ravages of the Allemans, Goths, Quodians, Parthians, and others,—and a terrible pestilence, of fifteen years' continuance, which almost half desolated the whole Roman empire, about 252. And so accustomed were dogs, and other ravenous animals, to live on the unburied carcasses, that they sometimes fell upon and destroyed the living. The fifth seal, 9—11, represents the souls of such as had been slain for their adherence to Christ's cause in the preceding persecutions, as enjoying rest and happiness through and with him in heaven; and as crying for vengeance on the heathen persecuting empire, but required to wait till their fellow-christians should be also murdered in the terrible Dioclesian persecution, A. D. 302—312. The sixth seal, 12—17, represents the dreadful consternation, confusion, and fearful ruin of the heathen emperors and their armies, and of the idolatrous priests, with their idolatries and superstitions, when Constantine the Great successfully warred against them, commenced a Christian himself, abolished heathenism, and established the Christian religion in its stead. [See INTRODUCTION, chap. iv. sect. xviii, xix.]

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—Orderly arranged are all the events of Providence: and gospel ministers ought carefully to observe them, and call their hearers to do the same. Glorious are the spread and conquests of the gospel when Christ rides forth on it with his gracious influence. Great are the trials of faith and patience even unto death, which his people are sometimes called to suffer for their faithful attachment to his truths and interests. But it is enough if he support and encourage them under their troubles, and at last, through his righteousness, render them partakers of the purity, peace, and honour of the heavenly state.—While his church languishes in her spiritual, or even external condition, persecuted, and bereaved of pure gospel ordinances, and of eminent ministers and Christians; by terrible wars, famines, pestilences, and a miserable dissolution of their long established civil constitutions, he punishes her persecutors. No place, no difference of rank, can screen from his just vengeance.—How dreadful then must be the last judgment, and the damnation of hell.

CHAP. VII.—Ver. 1. The holding in of the winds for a time, denotes the restraint of the Arian, Macedonian, Pelagian, Eutychian, and other errors, which afterwards plagued the church; and the restraint of the fearful judgments that troubled and ruined the Roman empire, which took place under the trumpets; till many souls were gathered to Jesus, and established in the faith by the Holy Ghost, during the last fifteen years of Constantine's reign, A. D. 323—337. 2, 3. Christ is the sealing Angel, who seals his people. He has divine power and authority from his Father over angels and every other creature: He has all fulness of the Spirit dwelling in him: He knows who are his, and can distinguish, pre-

* This sealing on "the forehead" seems to be an allusion to the inscription, "HOLINESS TO THE LORD," which Moses was commanded to engrave, and Aaron always to wear on his forehead (Ex. 28. 36—38. Here the seal bore "the Father's name," (see ch. 14. 1). See also John 6. 27. 1 Cor. 1. 22. Eph. 1. 13. & 4. 30: and, from Ezek. 9. 4, it will appear that the sealed are those true penitents "who sigh and cry" for the sins of the nations and the churches.—ED.

† The "hundred and forty and four thousand" is an arithmetical representation of the literal Israel converted to Christ, because Israel, as descended in the line of promise (Gen. 17. 19. Gal. 3. 16) was a numbered people—(see Ex. 12. 37. Num. 1. 2—4, 46)—(numbered for sake of their genealogies, privileges, hopes, and possessions,—emblems of the elect of God,)—and are thus contrasted with the Gentile converts "whom no man could number." But "the Lord knoweth them that are his." 2 Tim. 2. 19.—ED.

‡ After this.—Literally, "after these things"—the note of a new vision (see ch. 4. 1. & 7. 1), that of the Jewish and Gentile martyrs, as the preceding was of the sealed Jewish converts.—Note. This sealing seems to open another vision which does not follow the sixth seal in order of time, but returns to represent Christianity at its origin under a new aspect, that of safety in the election of grace and sealing of the Spirit. This conclusion is drawn from the description of the sealed ones (ch. 14. 4) as "the first-fruits to God and the Lamb."—ED.

* The imagery of the angel with the "golden censer," "incense," and "fire off the altar," seems to be taken from the high priest on the day of expiation (Lev. 16. 12, 29—34), and the angel who presents "the prayers of the saints" can be no other than "the angel of the covenant," "the angel of the Lord," our great "High Priest" in heaven, who "ever liveth to make intercession" for his church, and is now "waiting till his enemies be made his footstool."—ED.

† The fire being cast "into the earth"—the Jewish state and Roman empire—intimates a prophetic transition from ecclesiastical to civil affairs. See ver. 7.—ED.

‡ The imagery of "the hail," &c., appears to be taken from Ex. 9. 13—18, 22—25, and indicates judgments upon the imperial oppressors who enslaved the church, and refused to Christians the liberty of worshipping God according to his command, and their own consciences. The "blood" being added to the plague of hail, indicates a judgment by destructive wars. See also Ezek. 38. 22.—ED.

§ Green grass burnt up, represents a prosperous people reduced to servitude and misery. See Is. 40. 6, 7. 1 Pet. 1. 24. Jam. 1. 10.—ED.

AND when he had opened the seventh seal, there was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour.

2 And I saw the seven angels which stood before God; and to them were given seven trumpets.

3 And another angel came and stood at the altar, having a golden censer;* and there was given unto him much incense, that he should offer it with the prayers of all saints upon the golden altar which was before the throne.

4 And the smoke of the incense, which came with the prayers of the saints, ascended up before God out of the angel's hand.

serve, and appropriate them to himself as his peculiar people, and enable them boldly to profess his truths. 5—8. These sealed ones are represented as Hebrew tribes, because typified by the ancient Israelites, and begotten to God by the doctrine of the twelve apostles. 9—17. These verses represent the joy, purity, safety, and happiness of the souls in the heavenly state, of those that had suffered under the heathen persecutions; while no more than a short calm, succeeded by fearful storms of troubles should take place on earth; and the joy, purity, safety, and happiness of the successors of such as had been persecuted by heathens and papists during the thousand years' reign of the saints; and, in fine, the complete joy, purity, safety and happiness, of all the redeemed, after the last judgment, through all eternity.—As chap. xx, xxi, xxii. [See INTRODUCTION, chap. v.]

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—With tender care Jesus grants his people seasonable respite from trouble, lest they should utterly faint. For their sakes he often averts his judgments from the nations, in which they are permitted to live in peace and safety. And marvellously, even in the worst of times, he converts and preserves multitudes to own, honour, worship, and obey him. The expected glories of heaven ought powerfully to animate the saints to faithfulness in his cause. There all their labours and sufferings shall be abundantly compensated; there shall they be perfectly free from sin and from misery; a fulness of happiness and joy, pure and glorious appearances, and immediate fellowship with Christ and his Father, shall cause them to triumph in his praise.—But not to their care or free will, but to God alone be the glory! Their whole salvation is owing to Jehovah's grace, and to Jesus' merits: Even their best works are not acceptable to God, but through the blood of his Son.

CHAP. VIII.—Ver. 1. The half hour's silence in heaven may either denote the awful expectation of what was to follow, or the short calm during the last fifteen years of Constantine's reign, A. D. 323—337. 2, 6. The sounding of the trumpets supposes a church to hear the alarm, and denotes threatening appearances of fearful calamities. 3, 4. Christ's being here represented as standing at the golden altar, and offering up the prayers of his saints, imports that it is only through his merits and intercession that the prayers of saints are heard, for their own protection, or the punishment of their implacable enemies. 5. His casting a censer full of burning coals from off the brazen altar upon the earth, denotes his furious infliction of fearful, but just judgments on the Roman empire, which had so corrupted the Christian faith, worship, and manners; and the terrible tempest which followed, denotes the fearful and alarming calamities which his wrath produced. 7—12. The hail and fire mingled with blood, cast upon the earth under the first trumpet, may denote the schism of the Donatists, and especially the prevalence of the Arian heresy, with the dreadful contentions, bloody persecutions, and destruction of souls.

* Scorpions.—The prophetic emblems of a people rebelling against divine government, speaking evil of spiritual dignities (Ezek. 2. 6. 2 Pet. 2. 10. Jude 8), and poisoning the victims of their vanity, hypocrisy, and depravity.—Ed.

‡ Five months are said to be the period during which the locust perpetrates its annual depredations. They have also been supposed by some Expositors to describe the predatory irruptions of the Saracens into the Eastern Roman empire, which usually lasted five months in each year. Others view them as prophetic months, or 150 years, descriptive of the time between the fall of the Western Roman empire and the rise of Mahommedanism. But as the first of these interpretations is unsupported by Scriptural analogy, and the second inconsistent with historical fact, it becomes necessary to seek the meaning in the earlier prophetic Scriptures. Accordingly, from Jer. 1. 3. & 52. 12. Ezek. 20. 1. Zech. 7. 3, 5, it appears that "the fifth month" marked an annual fast in commemoration of the destruction of the temple and city, and carrying away of the people, by Nebuchadnezzar. Do not these "five months" of torment, therefore, intimate the torment of the Jews by their own satanic factions (see Josephus, Bel. Jud. iv. 9, 10), by which they were not destroyed, but prepared for the ruin of their temple, their city, and their nation, by the Romans; who, while they thus executed the prophetic judgments of God upon that rebellious generation, were not permitted by Providence, at that time, to injure the infant Christian church, but merely "the men who had not the seal of God in their foreheads?"—Ed.

CHAPTER IX.

(1) The fifth angel sounds—a star falls from heaven who opens the bottomless pit, whence issue locusts like scorpions, introducing the first of three great woes: 1—12. (2) The sixth angel sounds, when four bound angels are let loose: 13—21.

AND [a]the fifth angel sounded, and I saw [b]a star fall from heaven unto the earth: and [c]to him was given the key of the bottomless pit.

2 And he opened the bottomless pit; and there arose a smoke* out of the pit, as the smoke of a great furnace; and the sun and the air were darkened by reason of the smoke of the pit.

* Smoke.—Lies in hypocrisy (1 Tim. 4. 2. John 8. 44.), whereby truth is darkened, and men deceived into perdition. 2 Thes. 2. 11.—Ed.

3 And there came out of the smoke locusts upon the earth: and unto them was given power, as the scorpions* of the earth have power.

4 And it was commanded them that they should not hurt the grass of the earth, neither any green thing, neither any tree;† but only those men which have not the seal of God in their foreheads.

5 And to them it was given that they should not kill them, but that they should be tormented five months:‡ and their torment was as the torment of a scorpion, when he striketh a man.

6 And in those days shall men seek death, and shall not find it; and shall desire to die, and death shall flee from them.

7 And the shapes of the locusts were like unto horses prepared unto battle; and on their heads were as it were crowns like gold, and their faces were as the faces of men.

8 And they had hair as the hair of women, and their teeth were as the teeth of lions.

9 And they had breastplates, as it were breastplates of iron; and the sound of their wings was as the sound of chariots of many horses running to battle.

10 And they had tails like unto scorpions; and there were stings in their tails: and their power was to hurt men five months.

11 And they had a king over them, which is the angel of the bottomless pit, whose name in the Hebrew tongue is Abaddon, but in the Greek tongue hath his name Apollyon.

12 One wo is past; and, behold, there come two woes more hereafter.

thereby produced in the church; the bloody wars between Constantine's sons and the different usurpers; and the barbarous ravages of the Goths and others in the empire, A. D. 338—379. The burning mountain cast into the sea, under the second trumpet, may denote the terrible contentions about precedency in the church, and the bloody persecutions raised by bishops against one another, which banished lively religion from among all ranks in the church; and the terrible ravages of the empire in France and Spain by the Goths and Vandals; the repeated ravages of Italy by the Goths under Rhadagaisus and Alaric, and the burning of Rome by the latter, A. D. 308—412. The flaming star called wormwood falling on, and poisoning the rivers and fountains, may denote the Nestorian and Eutychian errors, but especially the Pelagian heresy, corrupting the doctrines of Christ to the spiritual and eternal ruin of multitudes in the church;—the ravages of the Huns under Attila, and the ravages of Italy by the Vandals under Genseric in 455, and of the Goths, Heruli, and others under Odoacer, who, about 476, twice took and plundered Rome, deposed Augustulus the last emperor, and established a kingdom of his own, A. D. 413—492. The darkening of the sun, moon, and stars, under the fourth trumpet, denotes the introduction of superstition, along with Pelagian and Semipelagian errors, till the Scripture was quite obscured, and ordinances and ministers quite corrupted, in the church;—and the terrible wars between Justinian the Greek emperor and the Goths, and the fearful pestilences and famines that attended them, which issued in depriving Rome of all its remains of ancient power and authority, and rendering it subject to the exarchate of Ravenna, A. D. 493—568.

Reflections upon Chap. VIII.—The peaceful periods of the church on earth are ordinarily but very short. But infinite is the mercy, that Jesus perpetually stands before his Father's throne making intercession for his people, and offering up their prayers with acceptance, on the ground of his own finished and meritorious righteousness; and that, though the most fearful judgments be inflicted on nations and churches for the contempt of him, they are all regulated according to his and his people's requests. He loudly warns men before he severely strikes them. But if once his wrath begin to burn, dreadful are his judgments on both churches and states. And terrible, but still limited, storms and floods of his just vengeance come one after another. Never dare my soul, to contemn or refuse him: never dare to live carnally and earthly; never dare to provoke him to jealousy. Am I stronger than he?

Chap. IX.—Ver. 1. The falling star, to whom was given the key of the bottomless pit, may denote Boniface III. of Rome, who, by flattering Phocas, an almost infernal emperor, about A. D. 606, obtained an imperial edict, by which he was declared universal bishop of the church:—and Mahomet, who, about the same time, pretended a journey to heaven to fetch thence his delusions; both of whom were divinely empowered to plague mankind, and had the assistance of hell to promote their schemes. 2. The darkening smoke rising from hell, imports the terrible ignorance, superstition, error, and wickedness which then reigned among Christians, and made them an easy prey to the Popish and Mahometan delusions, which more and more darkened men's understandings, hid the light of God's truth from them, and destroyed everything dear and valuable. 3—11. The locusts denote the Popish clergy, regular and secular, under Satan and the Pope as their Head; tormenting men by the introduction of error, idolatry, superstition, and horrid profaneness; and, by their tyrannical oppressions of men's consciences, exaction of their wealth, excommunications, interdicts, persecutions, massacres, fearfully enslaving magistrates, murdering men's souls and bodies, and making even natural life a burden to them, during the time fixed by God, perhaps five-twelfths of the New Testament period;—and denote the Saracen armies, who, chiefly mounted on horses, and commanded by murderous generals, did, with great pride and fury, for about 150 years, and chiefly during the five summer months, spread ravage, desolation, and bloodshed through much of Asia, the north of Africa, and south of Europe; there establishing their delusion and empire. [See Introduction, chap. iv. sect. xvi.] 13—19. The four angels bound by the Euphrates, denote, not the Saracens, in whose history, after their former period of 150 years, reaching to A. D. 760, nothing answers to this vision, but the Turks, who, after pouring themselves into Persia, and places about the Euphrates for 300 years, did, A. D. 1040—1080, form themselves into the four kingdoms of Bagdad, Damascus, Aleppo, and Iconium, all adjacent to that river. By their own mutual contentions, and by the war

14 Saying to the sixth angel which had the trumpet, Loose the four angels* which are bound in the great river Euphrates.†

15 And the four angels were loosed, which were prepared ‡for an hour,§ and a day, and a month, and a year, for to slay the third part‖ of men.

16 And the number of the army of the horsemen were two hundred thousand thousand: and I heard the number of them.

17 And thus I saw the horses in the vision, and them that sat on them, having breastplates of fire, and of jacinth, and brimstone: and the heads of the horses were as the heads of lions; and out of their mouths issued fire, and smoke, and brimstone.

18 By these three was the third part of men killed, by the fire, and by the smoke, and by the brimstone, which issued out of their mouths.

19 For their power is in their mouth,* and in their [a]tails: for their tails were like unto serpents, and had heads, and with them they [b]do hurt.

20 And the rest of the men† which were not killed by these plagues [c]yet repented not of [d]the works of their hands, that they should not worship devils, and idols of gold, and silver, and brass, and stone, and of wood; which neither can see, nor hear, nor walk:

21 Neither repented they of their murders, nor of their sorceries, nor of their fornication, nor of their thefts.

5 And the angel which I saw stand upon the sea and upon the earth lifted up his hand to heaven,

6 And sware‡ by him that liveth for ever and ever, who created heaven, and the things that therein are, and the earth, and the things that therein are, and the sea, and the things which are therein, that there should be time§ no longer:

7 But in the days of the voice of the seventh angel, when he shall begin to sound, the mystery‖ of God* should be finished, as he hath declared to his servants the prophets.

8 And the voice which I heard from heaven spake unto me again, and said, Go and take the little book which is open in the hand of the angel which standeth upon the sea and upon the earth.

9 And I went unto the angel, and said unto him, Give me the little book. And he said unto me, Take it, and eat it up;† and it shall make thy belly bitter, but it shall be in thy mouth sweet as honey.

10 And I took the little book out of the angel's hand, and ate it up; and it was in my mouth sweet‡ as honey: and as soon as I had eaten it, my belly was bitter.

11 And he said unto me, Thou must prophesy again before many peoples, and nations, and tongues, and kings.

which the Popish Europeans carried on with them for the recovery of Canaan, and by the invasion of the Jenghizan Tartars, they were indeed about 200 years divinely restrained from ravaging the countries of the corrupt Christians; but these restraints being removed, the Ottoman Turks, about A. D. 1281 or 1302, began their ravages and conquests on the Christians, and carried them on till A. D. 1672 or 1698, and with great fury and bloodshed established an extensive empire in Asia, Africa, and Europe; and their Mahometan delusion along with it. [See Introduction, chap. iv. sect. xvii.] 20, 21. But the professed Christians, whether Papists, Greeks, or others, who survived these fearful ravages and murders of the Ottoman Turks, were not in the least reformed by these calamities from their idolatries, murders, frauds, and dreadful apostasy or uncleanness. [Introduction, chap. iv. sect. xix.]

Reflections upon Chap. IX.—If the solemn warnings of Jesus and his faithful ministers be contemned, tremendous executions of his wrath may be expected. He can let loose the most numerous and well-furnished armies of devils and of men, crafty and furious, to deform his church, or desolate her countries of hypocritical professors. And according to his sovereign will and powerful intercession, he restrains, or lets them loose, when, and where he pleases. How active, sagacious, and insinuating are the instruments of his wrath! and yet, how furious and destructive! But it is the comfort of the saints, that Jesus can, and will preserve them as his sealed ones, in the worst of times, as far as is for his glory, and their real benefit. And, alas! how stupid and hardened their hearts, who, under the most terrible judgments of God, refuse to repent and reform, but grow worse and worse, till they be utterly destroyed by the vials of his wrath.

Chap. X.—Ver. 1. Christ's being clothed with a cloud may denote his hidden glory, awful majesty, and the darkness of his providential dispensations. The rainbow on his head denotes his being ever mindful of his covenant of grace, and prizing it as his glorious crown. 2. The little book open signifies the revealed purposes of God concerning what was still to take place, especially under the seventh trumpet. His right foot on the sea, and left foot on the earth, represents Christ as sovereign Lord of the whole world, and that he would extend his kingdom of grace to Asia, Africa, Europe, and America, and the isles of the sea far and near. 3. His terrible voice denotes the majestic, awful, and silencing nature of his word and providence. The voice of the seven thunders that followed seem to have uttered somewhat concerning the seven vials of his wrath upon the Antichristians, which John was required to keep in his own mind, but not to write, as he was afterwards to have that matter more clearly represented to him. 9, 10. John's eating this opened book denotes his considering, understanding, and being suitably affected with its contents. It was sweet in his mouth, but bitter in his belly, (i. e.) he took pleasure in discerning the mind of God, his tender care of his church, and the final issue of her troubles; but it pained him to think what fearful distress and persecution she had to suffer in this world before her remarkable or final deliverance.

Reflections upon Chap. X.—It is the comfort of believers, that, however dark and terrible the dispensations of providence may be, Jesus is the great manager of them, and hath therein a constant and exact regard to his new covenant. He hath all power in heaven and on earth, and will, in his own time, render all the nations of the world his spiritual kingdom. When he appears in glorious majesty, it is for the relief of his people, and destruction of their enemies; and the mysteries of providence, and predictions of Scripture, shall soon be fulfilled to his glory, and their joy and triumph; yea, his kingdom on earth and in heaven shall be quickly established on the ruin of all opposition.—God's favourites must be content with what he pleases to reveal to them, and must affectionately meditate on it, and publish it as regularly called. Nevertheless, it cannot but be distressful to faithful ministers or Christians, to think of terrible persecutions coming on the church, or ruinous destruction upon nations.

A. M. cir. 4100.
A. D. cir. 96.

AND there was given unto me a reed like unto a rod: and the angel stood, saying, Rise, and measure the temple of God, and the altar, and them that worship therein.

2 But the court which is without the temple leave out, and measure it not; for it is given unto the Gentiles: and the holy city shall they tread under foot forty and two months.

3 And I will give power unto my two witnesses,* and they shall prophesy a thousand two hundred and threescore days, clothed in sackcloth.†

4 These are the two olive-trees, and the two candlesticks standing before the God of the earth.

5 And if any man will hurt them, fire‡ proceedeth out of their mouth, and devoureth their enemies: and if any man will hurt them, he must in this manner be killed.

6 These have power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophecy; and have power over waters to turn them to blood, and to smite the earth with all plagues, as often as they will.

7 And when they shall have finished§ their testimony, the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit‖ shall make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them.

8 And their dead bodies shall lie in the street of [a]the great city, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified.

9 And they of the people, and kindreds, and tongues, and nations, shall see their dead bodies three days and an half, and shall not suffer their dead bodies to be put in graves.

10 And they that dwell upon the earth shall rejoice over them, and make merry, and shall send gifts one to another; because these two prophets tormented them that dwelt on the earth.

11 And after three days and an half* the Spirit of life from God entered into them, and they stood upon their feet; and great fear fell upon them which saw them.

12 And they heard a great voice from heaven saying unto them, Come up hither. And they ascended up to heaven† in a cloud; and their enemies beheld them.

13 And the same hour was there a [b]great earthquake, and the tenth part of the city‡ fell, and in the earthquake were slain [c]of men seven thousand: and the remnant [d]were affrighted, and gave glory to the God of heaven.

14 The [e]second wo is past; and, behold, [f]the third wo cometh quickly.

15 And the seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever.

16 And the four and twenty elders, which sat before God on their seats, fell upon their faces, and worshipped God, 17 Saying, We give thee thanks, O Lord God Almighty, which art, and wast, and art to come; because thou hast taken to thee thy great power, and hast reigned.

18 And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead,§ that they should be judged, and that thou shouldest give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name, small and great; and shouldest destroy them which destroy the earth.

19 And the temple of God was opened in heaven, and there was seen in his temple the ark of his testament: and there were lightnings, and voices, and thunderings, and an earthquake, and great hail.

* Two witnesses.—The following is an abstract of interpretations:—1. The Scriptures and assemblies of believers. 2. Unpolluted priests and faithful magistrates. 3. The Waldenses and Albigenses. 4. The Old and the New Testament. 5. The Protestant and Greek churches. 6. The word and Spirit of God. 7. A sufficiency of witnesses,—in allusion to the Mosaic requirement of "two or three witnesses." 8. A succession of faithful ministers of the word, inasmuch as they prophesy 1260 years. 9. An allusion to the general fact of two cognate witnesses being usually commissioned by the Spirit—as, Moses and Aaron, Elijah and Elisha, Zerubbabel and Joshua, Ezra and Nehemiah, the seventy disciples sent two by two, Paul and Barnabas, Paul and Timothy, Luther and Calvin, Knox and Melville, Latimer and Ridley, &c. &c. But inasmuch as the "two witnesses" are identified with "two candlesticks," and as a "candlestick" is the apocalyptic emblem of a church (Rev. 1. 20), may not the "two witnesses" represent believers and reformers in the Jewish and Christian churches, who are, from time to time, raised up in uninterrupted succession as witnesses for God, in opposition to Heathenism, Romanism, and Infidelity?—Ed.

a Ch. 14. 8, 15, 17, 18. & 18. 2, 10. ver. 13.

* These "three days and a half" are most probably an allusion to the three years and a half during which Antiochus Epiphanes held possession of Jerusalem, profaned the temple, and abolished religious services. Here they foretell three years and a half during which so many of the faithful witnesses of the gospel will be so persecuted and slain, and the preaching of the gospel so effectually suppressed, that the powers of superstition, idolatry, and infidelity, who had united in the war, shall now combine in a short-lived triumph over the victims of their persecution.—Note. A partial exemplification of this imaginary triumph is recorded in the Te Deum being sung at Rome on occasion of the most horrible event in modern history, the murdering of the Huguenots! and a similar exemplification of its duration in the three years and a half during which Christianity was suppressed throughout France subsequent to the revolution of 1793. And such partial fulfilments seem agreeable to the genius of prophecy, as calling the attention of believers to the more awful completion.—Ed.

CHAP. XI.—Ver. 1. The measuring of the temple, altar, and worshippers, with a reed, denotes that everything in the gospel church ought to be precisely conformed to God's word, without any mixture of human inventions; and that preservation and reformation from Popery must be by a careful search, experience, and observance of God's word. 2. The giving of the outer court to the Gentiles, denotes that formal professors would be left to fall under the power of the idolatrous and wicked Papists. The forty-two months, or one thousand two hundred and sixty days, time, times, and half a time, ver. 3. chap. xii. 6—14. and xiii. 5. denote the 1260 years' continuance of the Antichristian power, i. e. from A. D. 606, when the Pope of Rome was by Phocas the emperor constituted the universal bishop of the Christian church, to A. D. 1866;—or from 756, when the Pope became a temporal prince, to 2016. 3. Christ's two witnesses denote the small but sufficient succession of faithful ministers, who, from age to age, amidst grief and persecution, bear witness against the abominations of Popery. 4. They, like olive-trees before God, are remarkably furnished with gifts and graces; and being protected and delighted in by him, do minister as in his presence, and depending on his grace. 5, 6. God shall fearfully resent the injuries done them, fulfil the threatenings they denounce in his name, and grant their requests. 7—10. Whatever murder of Christ's witnesses may have been effected during the whole reign of Antichrist, or whatever particular persecutions of about three years and a half continuance have taken place, I suppose the general slaughter here intended is yet future; in which I fear the Papists, who are like Sodomites in uncleanness, and Egyptians in cruel oppression of God's people, will, partly by drawing men off from the doctrines of the gospel, and partly by murderous wars and persecutions, leave scarcely any shadow of proper opposition to their abominations in Europe, or the countries thereto belonging. 11—13. But scarcely shall the Antichristians, to their great joy, have apparently effected the ruin of Christ's witnesses, when God, by his word and Spirit, shall strangely revive, animate, and encourage them, and, under his special protection, exalt them to eminent dignity, power, and prosperity;—while, about the very time of the sounding of the seventh trumpet, the Popish state shall be thrown into terrible convulsions and ruin; many Papists miserably destroyed, and others alarmed; and by the gospel converted to Christ, more marvellously than at the Reformation. 15—19. All the nations of the world shall be generally converted to the Christian faith, and made members of the gospel church;—and great shall be her light, glory, and liberty, and abundant the access into her; but fearful and destructive the judgments which shall overtake her enemies.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—In the very worst of times God will preserve for himself a church, answerable to the promises, and in some measure conformed to the rules of his word. And in separating the precious from the vile, he makes no account of mere nominal and carnal professors, but leaves them to the power of Antichristian or other deceivers. In evil times Christ's faithful ministers are often extremely few, but still sufficient to bear witness to his truths; and however afflicted and mournful their outward condition may be, and however grieved their hearts, God will honour them to be instrumental in conveying his light and influence to his church, and will resent the injuries done them, and conform his providence, in a great measure, to their warnings and prayers. Pretended Christians, oppressive idolaters, unclean monsters, and unreasonable and malicious murderers, tormented

(1) A woman in travail clothed with the sun appears in heaven: 1, 2. (2) A dragon appears ready to devour her child as soon as it was born: 3, 4. (3) The woman is delivered, her child is caught up into heaven, and she flies into the wilderness: 5, 6. (4) War in heaven—the dragon cast out: 7—9. (5) A voice of joy in heaven: 10—12. (6) The dragon persecutes the woman, whom the earth helps: 13—17.

This chapter should open at ch. 11. 19, which presents a new vision synchronizing with the ascension of our Lord, at which time the heavens were truly opened. Heb. 4. 14. & 9. 11, 12, 24. & 10. 19, 20.——The ark was one of those things that were wanting in the second temple, and its appearance now intimates that all the types are fulfilled in Christ risen and entered into the heavens.——Lightnings.—Sudden and unexpected manifestations of Christ and his divine power. Mat. 24. 27. Ex. 19. 16.——Voices.—Testimonies to Christ, as that of John, Mat. 3. 3. Lamentations, as those of Rama at the martyrdom of the infants, Mat. 2. 18. Of prayer and instruction, as of Paul and Barnabas. Acts 16. 25, 31, 32.

AND there appeared a great wonder in heaven; a woman * clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet,† and upon her head a crown of twelve stars:

2 And she, being with child, cried, travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered.

3 And there appeared another wonder in heaven; and behold a great red dragon,‡ having seven heads and ten horns, and seven crowns upon his heads.

4 And his tail drew the third part§ of the stars of heaven, and did cast them to the earth: and the dragon stood before the woman which was ready to be delivered, for to devour her child as soon as it was born.

5 And she brought forth a man-child, who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron: and her child was caught up unto God, and to his throne.

6 And the woman fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God, that they should feed her there a thousand two hundred and threescore days.

7 And there was war in heaven: Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels,

8 And prevailed not; neither was their place found any more in heaven.

* The woman has been supposed by some eminent expositors to represent the Jewish nation or church, which were identical;—but this does not accord with her clothing; for the unbelieving Jewish church had cast off "the righteousness of God," comp. Mal. 4. 1. with Rom. 10. 3.—Ed.

† The moon under her feet, is equivalent to the inscription "faithful witness." (see Ps. 89. 37. Rev. 3. 12. comp. also ch. 12. 11.)—Note. This vision, commencing ch. 11. 19, does not begin after the seventh trumpet, ch. 11. 15, but returns to the prophetic period previous to the birth of Christ, and proceeds to give a brief outline and exposure of Satan's invisible enmity, machinations, and warfare against the church, (see Eph. 6. 11—13, 16.) until his final overthrow throughout the "days of the seventh trumpet."—Ed.

‡ A great red dragon.—Satan as the spirit of persecution and murder, (see John 8. 44. 1 John 3. 12,) entering and possessing the body of the Roman empire.—Ed.

§ The third part.—The Jewish teachers who "sat in Moses' seat," but were drawn of Satan to purchase and shed, as Judas was to sell, the blood of our Lord.—Note. The world, as touching religion ("heaven") was then divided into three parts: Jews, Christians, and heathens. The heathens Satan had not then to draw: they were the political beast already fully possessed.—Ed.

9 And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth,* and his angels were cast out with him.

10 And I heard a loud voice† saying in heaven, Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ: for the accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accused them before our God day and night.

11 And they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony; and they loved not their lives unto the death.

12 Therefore rejoice, ye heavens, and ye that dwell in them. Wo to the inhabiters of the earth‡ and of the sea! for the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, because he knoweth that he hath but a short time.§

13 And when the dragon saw that he was cast unto the earth, he persecuted the woman which brought forth the man-child.

14 And to the woman were given two wings‖ of a great eagle, that she might fly * into the wilderness,† into her place, where she is nourished for a time, and times, and half a time, from the face of the serpent.

15 And the serpent cast out of his mouth water, as a flood,‡ after the woman, that he might cause her to be carried away of the flood.

16 And the earth helped the woman; and the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed up the flood which the dragon cast out of his mouth.

17 And the dragon was wroth with the woman, and went to make war with the remnant of her seed, a which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ.

* This event was effected either during the miraculous powers put forth by our Lord, and bestowed upon his disciples, (Luke 10. 18), or upon occasion of our Lord's death when he destroyed the works, and, consequently, the power of the devil. John 12. 31.—Ed.

† Does not this "loud voice" synchronize with the "great voice" (ch. 11. 15,) the proclamation being similar, if not perfectly identical?—Ed.

‡ The earth.—Canaan—the Jews.——The sea.—The Gentiles of the Babylonian empire to which, under its Roman form, the prophecy mainly refers, Is. 21. 1—9. Jer. 51. 36—58.—Ed.

§ A short time—according to the divine computation of the future, (Ps. 17. 39. & 90. 4. 2 Pet. 3. 8), and even in man's computation of the past, Job 10. 20, & 14. 1. Ps. 39. 5.—Ed.

‖ An allusion to Deut. 32. 10, 11.—Ed.

* This is not a second flight of the woman, (see ver. 6), but a more particular account of the cause of the flight formerly recorded.—Ed.

† Wilderness.—A district unfrequented, and comparatively uncultivated and unknown. — Note. Specimens of the church thus protected from the face of the serpent, his wiles, his persecutions, and his agents, the beast and false prophet, may be found in the primitive British and Irish churches that were preserved free from the shackles of Rome for upwards of 1000 years, when they were nationally, though never individually, deceived or subdued; in the Christians of St Thomas in the East Indies,—the Nestorian Christians, (most probably Jews) in the countries bordering the Caspian sea, and in the churches of the Waldenses and Albigenses among the fastnesses of the Alps, Apennines, and Pyrenees, who all retain till this day, in a greater or less degree of perfection, the primitive faith and liberty.—Ed.

‡ Water as a flood—persecuting nations. See ch. 17. 15. Jer. 46. 7.—Ed.

by their holy doctrines, exemplary lives, and faithful admonitions, may long oppress, and at last silence and slay them; but their extremity of trouble shall usher in their glorious deliverance. The triumphing of their wicked enemies shall be short, and divine vengeance, redoubled, shall overtake them in an hour that they think not. For let enemies rage as they will, Jesus will at last vindicate his righteous cause and his suffering servants, and will bountifully reward them with the smiles of his providence and grace; reign before them gloriously, and cause them for ever to triumph in his praise. But by what fearful shakings of nations he ushers in the noted reformations of his church! Happy are they who, when his judgments are abroad in the earth, share his converting spirit, submit to his salvation and government, learn righteousness, and glorify his name!

CHAP. XII.—Ver. 1. The gospel church has Christ and his righteousness for her robe; and is irradiated with the light of truth, comfort, and holiness. She is elevated above the obscure light of Mosaic rites and ceremonies, and treads with holy indifference upon the enjoyments of this world; and all her light of knowledge and grace is communicated by means of, and according to, the doctrine of the twelve apostles. 2. Her travailing in birth denotes her strong groanings, eager desires, wrestling prayers, and indefatigable labours, under sharp persecutions, to bring forth converts, in whom Christ, in his doctrine and image, may be formed. 3, 4. The red dragon is the devil, acting in and by the power of the persecuting heathen empire of Rome, which, after seven forms of government, was split into ten kingdoms; or by the Popish power as extended over these ten kingdoms; by which multitudes of ministers were either murdered or seduced from the faith. 5. Her man-child may have some respect to Constantine, whom Providence marvellously advanced to the imperial throne, A. D. 312, and directed to abolish heathenism; but chiefly denotes a succession of faithful believers, who, notwithstanding all the malicious designs and attempts of the devil and his instruments, are brought forth, and wonderfully protected and honoured by God. 6, 14. The wilderness into which the church fled is that corrupt or concealed state in which true and practical religion, and truly faithful professors, continued all along from Constantine's time to the Reformation; or from the rise of Antichrist, about A. D. 606. 7, 8. The defeat and ejection of the dragon and his angels may denote the abolition of heathen idolatry, and ruin of the heathens' persecuting power by Constantine; if not also the abolition of Popery by many Protestant powers at the Reformation. 12, 13, 15. The dragon's rage at, and persecution of, the woman, and casting a flood out of his mouth to destroy her, may denote the devil's exerting himself to the utmost to destroy the church by the Arian, Pelagian, and other heresies, the Donatist schism, and the persecutions which attended them; by the Julian persecution, and the ravages of the Goths, Vandals, and others, in the Christian countries; or also, by the decrees, persecutions, wars, massacres, and missionaries, of the Papists, after the Reformation, for the destruction of the Protestant cause. 16. Corrupt ecclesiastics in their councils, and otherwise, defended the truths of the gospel against the Arian, Pelagian, Eutychian, and other heresies: the Goths, Vandals, and other ravaging tribes, diverted the Arian persecutors, and at last became professed Christians themselves; and, at the Reformation, many secular princes, and others, who had no real religion, took part with the reformers, and protected them from the Papal fury.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—Glorious is the gospel church when she appears lifted above worldly principles and customs, when she shines in Jesus' imputed righteousness and implanted grace, and is adorned with the pure doctrines of the gospel. By earnest desires, prayers, and labours, she then brings forth children to God through Christ. With great craft, fury, and diligence, Satan and his instruments exert themselves to corrupt or destroy the church, and hinder the

AND I stood upon the sand of the sea,* and saw a beast rise up out of the sea, having seven heads and ten horns, and upon his horns ten crowns,† and upon his heads the name of blasphemy.‡

2 And the beast which I saw was like unto a leopard, and his feet were as the feet of a bear, and his mouth as the mouth of a lion:§ and the dragon gave him his power, and his seat,‖ and great authority.

3 And I saw one of his heads as it were wounded to death;¶ and his deadly wound was healed: and all the world† wondered after the beast.

4 And they worshipped the dragon which gave power unto the beast: and they worshipped the beast, saying, Who is like unto the beast? who is able to make war with him?

5 And there was given unto him a mouth speaking great things, and blasphemies; and power was given unto him ‡to continue forty and two months.

6 And he opened his mouth in blasphemy against God, to blaspheme his name, and his tabernacle, and them that dwell in heaven.

7 And it was given unto him to make war with the saints, and to overcome them: and power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations.

8 [b]And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world.

9 If any man have an ear, let him hear.

10 He that leadeth into captivity shall go into captivity: he that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword. [c]Here is the patience and the faith of the saints.

11 And [d]I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth; and he had [e]two horns* like a lamb,† and he [f]spake as a dragon.‡

12 And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, [g]and causeth the earth, and them which dwell therein, to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed.

13 [h]And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men,

14 And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast; saying to [i]them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast§ which had the wound by a sword, and did live.

15 And he had power to give ‖life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed.

16 And he caused all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, *to receive [k]a mark† in their right hand,‡ or in their foreheads:

17 And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast,§ or the number of his name.‖

18 Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast: for it is the number of a man; and his number is Six hundred threescore and six.

* Sand of the sea.—Innumerable multitudes of people, comp. Gen. 22. 17. Rev. 17. 15.—Note. This vision is the counterpart of the former (ch. 11. 19. & 12. 1—17), and describes the earthly and visible agents of Satan in the persecution of "the woman," the true church, and "the remnant of her seed."—Ed.

† The dragon (ch. 12. 3) had "seven heads" crowned, and "ten horns," but without crowns. The beast here described has "ten horns, with ten crowns." The first, therefore, represents the pagan Roman empire possessed by the dragon and employed as his persecuting agents, consisting of the geographical elements of ten kingdoms, not yet separated into regal dynasties and governments: the second represents the empire when divided into distinct kingdoms, but all agreeing in the same work of persecuting the "seed of the woman."—Ed.

§ Daniel saw these three beasts (7. 4—6), and a fourth (ver. 7), whose species was not described. It is here described by John as a compound of the other three; and possessed, moreover, by the more destructive spirit of the dragon.—Ed.

‖ Seat.—Literally, "throne."—Ed.

¶ This wounded head represents the imperial power in the western Roman empire overrun and destroyed by the northern nations, when the very name of emperor had ceased to exist, and Rome was ranked but as a petty dukedom. The eastern empire, centring in Constantinople, still remained in comparative vigour as the other head.—Ed.

conversion of sinners, or to persecute and murder them whenever they appear serious. And if their plots be defeated, they become the more furious and active. But let them plot, fight, and rage as they will, Christ will restrain, and at last conquer them; and, notwithstanding the most fearful and lasting afflictions, will protect and preserve his faithful servants and people; and, in his time, render them victorious and triumphant. By faith in his atoning blood, as the only ground of their justification, and by faithfully contending, even unto death, for his injured truths, they shall overcome at last.

CHAP. XIII.—Ver. 1. This beast rising out of the sea denotes its origin to be from hell, and from the tumultuous state of the nations, once subject to the Roman power. Its having seven heads and ten crowned horns denotes its possessing the power of the Roman state, and ruling over the ten kingdoms formed out of that ruined empire. 2. Its likeness to a leopard, bear, and lion, imports that all the cruelty, activity, subtlety, and furious power of the Greek, Persian, and Chaldean empire would meet in the Papal jurisdiction. Its receiving the power, seat, and authority, of the dragon, signifies that, being seated at Rome, the power of Heathen emperors, and of the devil, would be devolved on the Pope and his assistants. 3. The healing of the wounded head may denote the Pope's restoring jurisdiction to Rome, by his becoming a civil prince; the erection of the German empire instead of the Roman; or the apostasy of the Protestants to Popery. 4. In their obedience to the arbitrary, idolatrous, and other wicked decrees of Popes and their councils, men practically worship the devil and the old Heathen idols. 5, 6. Its speaking great things and blasphemies includes all the Papal boasts of power, holiness, and merits; all their usurpation of power over magistrates, angels, and saints departed; over the laws and ordinances of God; and over the person and offices of Christ. 7, 8. While Satan stirred up the Popes and their agents to persecute, rob, and murder the followers of Christ, almost all the inhabitants of Europe submitted to their authority: 10. But after they have persecuted and murdered the saints, for many ages, till their faith is fully tried, and almost worn out, the judgments of God, answerable to their crimes, shall overtake them. 11. The earth, out of which this beast arose, denotes a carnal and worldly temper, or the bottomless pit. Its likeness to a lamb, but speaking as a dragon, imports that, notwithstanding the Pope's and Papalines' high pretences to the likeness of Christ in holiness and meekness, their injunctions and curses are cruel, bloody, and ruinous. 12. By excommunications and persecutions, and through the assistance of secular powers, Popes and their clergy make their subjects do what they please. 13, 14. By pretended and devilish miracles they terrify men into an implicit obedience to the clergy, and a ready compliance with their errors, idolatries, and superstitions. 15—17. They denied not only their pardons and indulgences, but even the natural or civil rights of lodging, dwelling, or trade, to all that did not, in practice or profession, plainly manifest themselves devoted to their power and delusions. 18. The number of the beast being 666, may hint that the Romish doctrines, laws, and offices, have apparently a marvellous connexion, but are no way founded on the doctrine of the twelve apostles. It is found in the Greek LATEINOS, and the Hebrew ROMIITH; and points to the Latin or Romish church, and the place of its peculiar residence. About A. D. 666, it is said Pope Vitalian marked the Papal subjects with the use of the Latin or Romish tongue. From the time when John had his vision, to the Pope's becoming a civil as well as an ecclesiastical head, and so a complete Antichrist, A. D. 756, or some years after, when he began to exercise his temporal jurisdiction, might be precisely 666 years.

* This notice is parallel to that of chap. 13. 10; from which comparison it is obvious that, in the former case, the "patience of the saints" was tried while witnessing the prosperity, enduring the persecution, and waiting for the downfal of Rome imperial, (ch. 13. 1—9); so here their "patience and faith" (faithfulness unto death) are tested in the labour of propagating "the everlasting gospel," (ver. 6), resisting the allurements and terrors, and waiting for the fall of Rome papal, ver. 8—11.—Ed.

† Blessed—from henceforth.—Rather, "Blessed, even now, (even before the glory of the new heavens) are the dead who die in the Lord."—Robinson.

§ Though there is no mention of judgment by Christ as an harvest man, yet, as both harvest and vintage are prophetical emblems of judgment, (Joel 3. 13), the reaping cannot be otherwise interpreted here.—Note. Does not this silence intimate that this first judgment, most probably, by mere prophetic announcement, as by "the sword of his mouth," will pass with little observation, like his tears shed over Jerusalem, and be treated with neglect and contempt till physical judgments succeed? The allusion of this emblem seems to be to the messenger of the Sanhedrim coming out of the temple to proclaim the cutting down of the "first-fruits" of the harvest—before which proclamation it was unlawful for any one to begin reaping.—Ed.

‖ The horses are those of the armies in heaven that follow the Lamb (ch. 19. 14); the emblems of the swiftness and power of the gospel testimony, and of the judgments on the despisers who now "wonder and perish."—Ed.

the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb:

11 And the smoke of their torment ascendeth up for ever and ever: and they have no rest day nor night who worship the beast and his image, and whosoever receiveth the mark of his name.

12 Here is the patience* of the saints: here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus.

13 And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth:† Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours; and their works do follow them.

14 And I looked, and behold a white cloud, and upon the cloud one sat like unto the Son of man, having on his head a golden crown,‡ and in his hand a sharp sickle.

15 And another angel came out of the temple, crying with a loud voice to him that sat on the cloud, Thrust in thy sickle, and reap: for the time is come for thee to reap; for the harvest of the earth is ripe.

16 And he that sat on the cloud thrust in his sickle§ on the earth; and the earth was reaped.

17 And another angel came out of the temple which is in heaven, he also having a sharp sickle.

18 And another angel came out from the altar, which had power over fire; and cried with a loud cry to him that had the sharp sickle, saying, Thrust in thy sharp sickle, and gather the clusters of the vine of the earth; for her grapes are fully ripe.

19 And the angel thrust in his sickle into the earth, and gathered the vine of the earth, and cast it into the great wine-press of the wrath of God.

20 And the wine-press was trodden without the city, and blood came out of the wine-press, even unto the horse-bridles,‖ by the space of a thousand and six hundred furlongs.*

easily succeed. The meekness of the Lamb, and fury of a leopard, lion, bear, and dragon, are united, to pervert and ruin the church. By the most horrid blasphemies, pretended or magical wonders, uncontrolled authority, and dreadful severity, they promote their unrighteous cause. And marvellous is their success, and extensive their power. By allurements or terrors multitudes are deluded into the grossest absurdities and most damnable doctrines and practices. None but those chosen by God and redeemed by Christ are secured from it. These, indeed, are often distressed by wars, persecutions, and martyrdom; but cannot be fully perverted or finally ruined. And it is the great support of their faith and patience, that God has fixed a time for their deliverance and the downfal of their enemies, in which every injury done them shall be fully repaid.—Though I cannot fix the times, which the Father has put in his own power, let my faith and patience have their perfect work! Patient waiting, and earnest watching, are far better than presumptuous curiosity.

Chap. XIV.—Ver. 1. Zion may either denote heaven, or the true church on earth. The saints being marked with God's name in their foreheads imports their being sealed and set apart as his property, and for his service; and their making an open and honourable profession of him and his gospel, attended with an answerable holiness of life. 4, 5. They were Virgins, i. e. they had not defiled themselves with the whorish idolatries and other abominations of the tempting Antichristians; but, as wholly redeemed from sins and errors, sanctified by, and consecrated to God, and as a pledge of far greater multitudes afterward, had faithfully and uprightly followed and adhered to Jesus Christ and his cause. 6—13. The witnesses of Christ, especially at the Reformation, plainly and powerfully preached the gospel, and warned men of the approaching ruin of the Papacy, and of the damnable nature of cleaving to it in opposition to the light of the gospel, which then shone forth; and taught that union to Christ by faith, and fellowship with him, only and effectually secured a happiness, an immediate happiness, after death; and that believers' good works did not merit heaven, but in it received a gracious reward. 14—20. These verses relate to future events, and import, that whenever the Antichristians shall have filled up the measure of their iniquities, Christ and his instruments shall, in answer to the prayers of his ministers and people, cut them off in the most terrible manner, perhaps deluging the Papal territories in Italy, of 200 miles length, with torrents of their blood.

Reflections upon Chap. XIV.—The cause of Jesus Christ and his faithful followers will triumph at last. And glorious is the appearance of his saints, when they answer their character in qualities and works, and have Christ among them owning and honouring them. Happy they when marked with the Father's Spirit and image; purified from idolatry and superstition; weaned from the world; and made sincere and upright in their profession of the pure doctrines of the gospel; and steady in their imitation of, and obedience to Christ. Their consciences are now freed from guilt and condemnation, through faith in his righteousness; and when patience hath had her perfect work, and their prescribed course of holiness is finished, death shall only usher them into the heavenly mansions, to receive their everlasting but gracious rewards. What an inestimable mercy was the pure preaching of the gospel at the Reformation, after so long and heavy a night of Popish darkness; and what a humbling stroke to the Antichristian interest, and sure prelude of its downfal! For certain, dreadful, but righteous and gradual, punishment shall overtake the obstinate abettors of it in this world, much more in hell.

AND I saw another sign in heaven, great and marvellous, seven angels having the seven last plagues; for in them is filled up the wrath of God.

2 And I saw as it were a sea of glass[*] mingled with fire; [†] and them that had gotten the victory [‡] over the beast, and over his image, and over his mark, and over the number of his name, stand on the sea [§] of glass, having the harps of God.

3 And they sing the song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, [‖] saying, Great and marvellous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints.

4 Who shall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorify thy name? for thou only art holy: for all nations shall come and worship before thee; for thy judgments are made manifest.

5 And after that I looked, and, behold, the temple of the tabernacle of the testimony in heaven was opened:

6 And the seven angels came out of the temple, having the seven plagues, clothed in pure and white linen, and having their breasts girded with golden girdles.

7 And [a] one of the four beasts gave unto the seven angels seven golden vials [*] full of the wrath of God, who liveth for ever and ever.

8 And the temple was filled with smoke from the glory of God, and from his power; and no man was able to enter into the temple [†] [b] till the seven plagues of the seven angels were fulfilled.

* This sea of glass—rather, crystalline—was not a geographical sea, but a large vessel in the temple called a sea, (1 Kin. 7. 23—39.), used by the priests for washing. (2 Chr. 4. 6). AND I heard [a] a great voice out of the temple saying to the [b] seven angels, [c] Go your ways, and pour out the vials of the wrath of God upon the earth.

2 And the first went, and poured out his vial [d] upon the earth; [e] and there fell a noisome and grievous sore upon the men [f] which had the mark of the beast, and upon them which worshipped his image.

3 [g] And the second angel poured out his vial upon the sea; [*] and it became as the blood of a dead man: and every living soul died in the sea.

4 [h] And the third angel poured out his vial upon the rivers and fountains of waters; and they became blood.

5 And I heard the [i] angel of the waters [†] say, [k] Thou art righteous, O Lord, [i] which art, and wast, and shalt be, because thou hast judged thus:

6 [m] For they have shed the blood of saints and prophets, and thou hast given them blood to drink; for they are worthy.

7 And I heard [n] another out of the altar say, Even so, Lord God Almighty, true and righteous are thy judgments.

8 [o] And the fourth angel poured out his vial upon the sun; [‡] and power was given unto him to scorch men with fire.

9 And men were [§] scorched with great heat, [p] and blasphemed the name of God, which hath power over these plagues: and [q] they repented not to give him glory.

CHAP. XV.—Ver. 1, 2. The sea of glass mingled with fire is the infinitely pure and efficacious righteousness of Christ, by which he appeased the fiery resentments of Divine justice, and through which the influences of the Holy Ghost are conveyed, and the perfections and favours of God marvellously discovered; and on which, as their foundation, the saints in heaven and earth stand with complete acceptance, confidence, and triumph, before God. 6. These messengers of God's vengeance appear arrayed as high priests, to denote the sanctity of their character, and their awful ministrations, in answer from God to the prayers of his people. 7. The receiving their vials filled from the first, or lion-like living creature, imports that love to the gospel influences them, and that their work fulfils the threatenings of God's word declared by ministers. 8. The smoke filling the temple may denote the awful and confounding judgments of God, obstructing all prayers for the Antichristians, and excluding them from all merciful entrance into his church.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XV.—Glorious is their triumph who stand in the immediate and ever-gracious presence of God, accepted in Jesus' imputed righteousness, and through faith victorious over all their spiritual enemies. Sweetly and solemnly they sing of mercy and judgment, and of the wonderful events of providence and grace, to the honour of Jehovah and his Son.—What adorable perfections delightfully shine forth in his nature and conduct! Happy will be that period when all nations shall be converted to and worship him; and when his judgments shall be fully manifested in the complete abolition of Popish and Mahometan delusions! Fixed is God's decree of their ruin; and fearful, but infallible the execution. Yea, all the proper instruments shall stand ready to accomplish it in his time.

CHAP. XVI.—Ver. 1. Already the Antichristians have had fearful earnests of these vials of Divine wrath poured out upon them. From A. D. 713 to 734, the Mahometan Saracens poured themselves into Spain and the south of France, rendering much of those countries a comparative desert. From A. D. 830 to 980, the contentions among the descendants of Charles the Great, emperor of Germany and king of France, and the ravages of the Hungarians in Italy and Sicily, deluged those countries with human blood. From A. D. 1090 to 1290 not a few millions were cut off, and most of Europe reduced to the brink of ruin by the sacred, or rather Papal, war for the recovery of Canaan from the Mahometan Seljukian Turks and Saracens. From 1200 to 1370 the contentions of the Guelfs and Gibellines, or Pope's and Emperor's parties, rendered Italy and Germany a scene of human carnage and blood. From 1370 to 1447 the repeated schisms of the Popes, and the oppression of the Bohemians, occasioned terrible wars in Spain, France, Germany, and Italy. Between 1486 and 1534 a sweating sickness, and other pestilential disorders, carried off prodigious multitudes in England, Germany, and France. From about 1370 to 1698 the Ottoman Turks proved a terrible scourge to the Papists in Hungary, Poland, Italy, Germany, Mediterranean isles, &c. But nothing has more tormented the Pope and his adherents, or more shaken their dominion, than the revolt of almost half their subjects in the Protestant Reformation, between A. D. 1517 and 1570, and the legal establishment thereof by the edict of Nantz, 1598, and treaty of Westphalia in 1648, &c. Nevertheless, the plagues chiefly intended in this chapter seem all to be still future, and will perhaps happen during the thirty years of fearful calamities, by which the glorious Millennium will probably be introduced. Without daring to be positive, under the first vial poured on the earth, I expect the infallibility and supremacy of the Pope, the authority of traditions, the doctrine of human merits, and other earthly and carnal foundations of Popery;—or the Popo's power in the inland countries of Germany, Poland, and Hungary, will, to his and his votaries' shame and vexation, be quite overturned. Under the second, poured into the sea, ver. 3, I expect the credit of the Romish religion will be remarkably blasted, and its damnable nature clearly manifested, or the maritime countries of Portugal, Spain, and Naples, plagued with famine, pestilence, earthquakes, and war. Under the third, poured on the rivers and fountains, ver. 4—7, I expect the wickedness and deceit of the Popish doctors, and their defences of their religion, will be clearly exposed, their cardinals, bishops, priests, and monks, proved murderers of souls, and many of them cut off by untimely deaths; or the well-watered countries of Switzerland, north of Italy, and south of France, where the Waldenses, Protestants, or others, were murdered for the sake of Christ, will be deluged with Antichristian blood. Under the fourth, poured on the sun, ver. 8, 9, a The seventh seal, (ch. 8. 1); the seventh trumpet, (ch. 11. 15); and the seventh vial, contain many more particulars in each than any of the other seals, trumpets, or vials. Of this difference one reason is obvious—the deeper interest of the church in the downfal of Antichrist, and the introduction of the kingdom of glory, than in all the rising, continuance, and downfal of the secular kingdoms of the world.—Ed.

† Full of names of blasphemy.—Rome having, in her heathen state, adopted the gods of all nations, and given them a temple in her pantheon, and blasphemously declared them entitled to worship; and having, in her papal state, raised apostles, angels, and imaginary saints without number, to the dignity of mediators, and blasphemously declared them, together with images, pictures, relics, and bread and wine, entitled to that worship which is due to God alone.—Ed.

‡ Fornication.—The prophetic emblem of religion prostituted for gain, (Is. 23. 17), and realized in the simoniacal sale of ecclesiastical dignities, and the most scandalous traffic in indulgences and masses, by which papal Rome has been enriched and disgraced.—Ed.

AND there came one of the seven angels which had the seven vials, [a] and talked with me, saying unto me, Come hither; I will show unto thee the judgment of the great whore that sitteth upon many waters:

2 With whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication.

3 So he carried me away in the spirit into the wilderness: and I saw a woman sit upon a scarlet-coloured beast, full of names of blasphemy, [†] having seven heads and ten horns.

4 And the woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet-colour, and decked with gold, and precious stones, and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication: [‡]

5 And upon her forehead was a name written, MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH.

6 And I saw the woman drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the

I hope that the instructive light and spiritual warmth of the gospel will draw off the German emperor, French king, or others, who have long been the Papists' principal glory and support, to the Protestant side; and perhaps the natural sun may produce some very destructive plague. Under the fifth, poured on the seat of Antichrist, ver. 10, 11, I expect the frame of the Papal kingdom will be broken to pieces, and filled with disorder and confusion; the whole system of Popery be made to appear abominable and devilish, and Rome itself be turned into a horrible desert;—which will occasion terrible grief, pain, and blasphemy, among the Papists, chiefly those who have enriched themselves by her idolatry and superstition. Under the sixth, poured into the river Euphrates, ver. 12—16, I expect Mahometanism will be abolished, and the conversion of the Eastern nations begun; the Papists and their adherents, assisted by their clerical missionaries, receive a terrible defeat at the battle of Armageddon; the Pope's proper share of Italy be almost covered with carcasses, the rivers swelled with blood, the Protestant victors enriched with the spoil, and many, alarmed by the event, turned to the Lord. Under the seventh, poured into the air, ver. 17—21, I expect the last remains of the Popish doctrine, worship, discipline, and government, monasteries and dignities, will be utterly abolished, and the obstinate adherents thereto, who had fled to the isles of Malta, Sicily, &c. be cut off by the fearful vengeance of God.

Reflections upon Chap. XVI.—Gradual, but terrible and righteous, are the judgments of God, which shall in due time be executed upon Popish idolaters and persecutors, and their ungodly companions in wickedness. Actuated by unclean diabolical spirits, and instigated by false teachers, they may for a little time gather themselves to contend with the Almighty Redeemer, obstinately persist in their abominable courses, and blaspheme God, as if he injured them. But quickly the vials of his wrath shall be poured out upon them, answerable to their guilt, till they be utterly and irrecoverably ruined. And unexpected, fearful, extensive, sudden, and destructive, shall be their punishment. Happy are they who shall be found clothed with Jesus' imputed righteousness, adorned with his grace, and watchfully preparing to meet him! While others howl and blaspheme for vexation of spirit, these shall rejoice in the Lord, and applaud the truly righteous and faithful executions of his wrath.

Chap. XVII.—Ver. 1. I will give you an account of her sins, and of God's righteous procedure in condemning and punishing her. The Papal state at Rome is called a Whore, because of their treacherous apostasy from Christ and his Father to idolatry and every other wickedness, while they pretend to be the spouse or church of Christ. Her sitting on many waters denotes her ruling over many nations with magnificent pomp, power, luxury, and other allurements. 2. The wine of her fornication includes all the Popish arts and allurements, honours, preferments, external pomp of habits, processions, and worship, pretended miracles, dispensations, pardons, and other specious motives, by which men are drawn into her idolatrous principles and practices. 3. Her being in the wilderness may denote her tyranny over the poor afflicted followers of Christ. The scarlet-coloured beast, full of names of blasphemy, and having seven heads and ten horns, is the Roman empire, as Papal, marked with imperial dignity, and with bloody and persecuting cruelty; pretending infallibility and unlimited supremacy; promoting idolatry and error; and which, after seven different forms of civil government, was divided into ten different kingdoms. 4. Her being clothed with purple and scarlet, and decked with gold, precious stones, and pearls, points out her Popes and Cardinals as assuming imperial authority, and stained with the blood of saints; and the wealth, grandeur, and power, of her palaces, churches, and monasteries. Her golden cup, full of abominations and filthiness of fornication, denotes her whole system of abominable errors, idolatries, and superstitions, varnished over with bold pretences to miracles, pardons, and indulgences, and to her being the only true church, and the like. 5. It is easy to observe that she is formed by the most shocking multitude of errors and crimes, invented and carried on in the most deep, secret, and unsearchable methods, even amidst the highest pretences of being the catholic and only church of Christ: and that, possessed of the most extensive jurisdiction, and notorious for idolatry, pride, luxury, and oppression, she is the parent, ringleader, supporter, and nourisher, of idolatry, superstition, error, uncleanness, and every other abominable crime. 6. I was astonished at her grandeur, cruelty, and dreadful wickedness, and at the patience of God in suffering her so long to tyrannize over his beloved people. 8. The beast, or Roman empire, has, under the Popes, a form of government different from all its ancient ones, but which retains martyrs of Jesus:* and when I saw her, I wondered with great admiration.

7 And the angel said unto me, Wherefore didst thou marvel? I will tell thee the mystery of the woman, and of the beast that carrieth her, which hath the seven heads and ten horns.

8 The beast that thou sawest was, and is not; and shall ascend out of the bottomless pit,† and go into perdition: and they that dwell on the earth shall wonder, (whose names were not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world,) when they behold the beast that was, and is not, and yet is.‡

9 And here is the mind which hath wisdom. The seven heads are seven mountains, on which the woman sitteth.

10 And there are seven kings: five are fallen, and one is, and the other is not yet come; and when he cometh, he must continue a short space.

11 And the beast that was, and is not, even he is the eighth,‖ and is of the seven, and goeth into perdition.

12 And the ten horns which thou sawest are ten kings, which have received no kingdom as yet; but receive power as kings one hour¶ with the beast.

13 These have one mind, and shall give their power and strength unto the beast.

14 These shall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them: for he is Lord of lords, and King of kings: and they that are with him are called, and chosen, and faithful.

15 And he saith unto me, The waters which thou sawest, where the whore sitteth, are peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues.

16 And the ten horns which thou sawest upon the beast, these shall hate the whore,* and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire.

17 For God hath put in their hearts† to fulfil his will, and to agree, and give their kingdom unto the beast, until the words of God shall be fulfilled.

18 And the woman which thou sawest [a] is that great city, which reigneth over the kings of the earth.

* Thousands of these "martyrs of Jesus" fell during the papal crusades against the Waldenses and Albigenses; multitudes during the reign of Mary in England; in the Bartholomew massacre of the Huguenots in France; in the dragonnades that followed on the revocation of the Edict of Nantz; and in every page of the history of the infamous Inquisition, which, though now happily extirpated, (at least for a time) in every other papal country in Europe, still subsists in Italy, and preserves its throne in Rome. —Ed.

† "The beast which was"—the Roman empire—"and is not" now so called, or, by many imagined to be the same, "shall ascend out of the abyss," the distractions of the dismembered empire; and finally, as the bearer of the blasphemous woman, "go into perdition."—Note. The word translated "bottomless pit" in this verse, is not the same as the word so translated in chap. 9. 11. —Ed.

* These ten kingdoms shall hate her, not because of her sins against God, but because of her arrogant assumption of power over kings; giving all their strength to the imperial beast, (ver. 13), while, in defence of their royal prerogatives, they put forth all their wrath against the papal woman.—Ed.

their whole authority, power, wealth, idolatry, persecuting cruelty, and other wickedness;—and though this Papal form hath its origin from diabolic craft and influence, and leads men into everlasting damnation, yet it is admired, and implicitly submitted to, by all within its reach, except the preserved elect of God. 9, 10. The seven heads of the beast point at the seven mountains on which Rome was built, and the seven forms of its government, by kings, consuls, dictators, decemvirs, military tribunes, emperors Heathen and Christian, and Gothic kings, which took place before the establishment of the Papal authority. 11. Though the Pope's civil power may, in respect of time, be called the eighth, yet, as it succeeds to the Heathen imperial authority, and is an idolatrous power, it is the seventh and last idolatrous form of government, comprehending all the power and wickedness of the six preceding. 12—14. The ten horns are the ten or several kingdoms into which the western empire of Rome was divided when the Papal power was established, all of which submitted to the Popish abominations, and exerted all their power to establish them, and force men to submit to them; and under the pontifical influence, to their own ruin, violently set themselves against Christ, to oppose and subvert his doctrines, institutions, cause, interests, and people. 16, 17. In God's time these kingdoms shall withdraw their subjection and support from the Papal state, and, by wars, statutes, and the like, shall concur to destroy it; for it is only for a limited time that, by his overruling their sinful inclinations, he will, for the fulfilment of his purposes and predictions, permit them, under the instigation of Satan, to yield up their strength, riches, and authority, to promote the Papal power, idolatries, superstitions, and errors. 18. The Antichristian power, civil and ecclesiastical, is to be seated in the hand of Popes and Cardinals, and raised to its height in the city of Rome, which is at present the residence of the Roman emperors.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVII.—God takes pleasure to instruct and comfort his faithful servants. And he can exactly describe the Antichristian Papacy, with all its mysteriousness, or anything else, long before it exists, and can make the distresses and plagues of his church confirmations of his word, on which she is built. Graceless church members often run the most fearful lengths in wickedness and cruelty, when left to themselves; yea, are active in seducing all around them. And multitudes, to their own temporal and eternal ruin, readily run after, and yield themselves to the worst deceivers, in the most furious opposition to Christ and his cause. But great is the mercy that he, who has all power in heaven and earth, takes part with his persecuted people, animates their faith and patience, imboldens them in their holy profession, and renders them faithful in adherence to himself. Quickly will he conquer all their enemies; and make the most zealous supporters of error, idolatry, and superstition, to desert, hate, and oppose them, and to strip the seducers of their ill-gotten power and wealth, and punish them answerably to their crimes.

CHAP. XVIII.—Ver. 1—3. To punish her for corrupting the nations with her idolatry, and other wickedness, and enriching her clergy with her traffic in divine things, the Papal state shall be utterly destroyed, and exposed as a diabolical system of uncleanness, murder, and every other shocking abomination; and Rome shall be turned into a desolate and frightful heap of rubbish. 4—6. As at the Reformation, multitudes revolted from Popery, to the advantage of their souls and their countries, so hereafter the faithful followers of Christ ought, and shall break off every connexion with it, and shall be God's instruments for ruining its power. 7, 8. The miseries of the obstinate Papists shall be dreadful, answerable to their former ambition, pride, luxury, and wealth. 11, 12, 15. Merchants may denote, not only such as trade in the commodities of life, but also the Romish clergy, who enrich themselves in selling spiritual offices, ordinances, pardons, deliverance from purgatory, and eternal happiness, to their deluded votaries.—The things mentioned, ver. 11—13, 22, 23, may either relate to the Popish worship, to their relics, pardons, indulgences, to their costly images, rich furniture of churches and chapels, and rich dresses for their images and priests, the incense used at their altars, their use of musical instruments in their worship, their burning of lamps before their altars and images;—or they may in general denote that Rome shall be so utterly ruined, that nothing valuable or desirable shall be left in it. 20, 24. The Papists' persecution of the oracles and saints of God will be especially regarded in and shall aggravate their ruin. 21—23. In the most sudden and terrible manner God will utterly, and without any possibility of recovery, destroy Rome and all her Antichristian influence.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVIII.—Sin brings the most fearful disgrace and misery upon wicked persons and societies at last; and as there is no opportunity of punishing societies in the other world, their sins must overtake them in this. Earthly grandeur, pleasure, luxury, power, and wealth, often issue in, and render our misery more intolerable: and God forces men to mourn under his judgments who refused to mourn for their sins. Let wickedness be varnished over with pretences to sanctity and kindness as it will, or have been committed ever so long ago, God will mark it, and, in his time, fearfully punish it with righteous judgments. Superstition, idolatry, lewdness, luxury, merchandise in spiritual things, in men's souls or bodies, allurements to apostasy from God, and particularly cruel persecutions of his saints and servants, will at last issue in everlasting confusion and irretrievable misery.—With conscientious zeal and abhorrence ought all true Christians to hasten from the spiritual fellowship of Antichristian churches or societies, that their own sin and temporal ruin may be prevented. And with holy joy and triumph ought all the people of God to behold his righteous judgments inflicted on incorrigible persecutors, by which he vindicates his own righteous cause, and delivers his people from future molestations.

CHAP. XIX.—Ver. 1, 4, 6. Perhaps the repeated use of the Hebrew word ALLELUJAH hints, that the newly converted Jews will, in a peculiar manner, rejoice at the destruction of Antichrist, whose idolatries had long filled them with

* Does it not appear from the worship of the elders, and the reason assigned ch. 19. 4, 5, when compared with the similar worship and reasons, ch. 11. 16, 17. that the two prophecies synchronize? That the first exhibits an epitome, and the second a full detail of the divine judgments against Babylon?—Ed.

† The covenant and spiritual union between Christ and his church, is often, in holy scripture, under the emblem of a "marriage," (see Song x. 11. Hos. 2. 16—20. 2 Cor. 11. 2. Eph. 5. 22—32), because whatever power of unchanging love, whatever pledge of truth and faithfulness, whatever obligation of provision and protection are contained in the idea of holy marriage, are all reckoned to believers in him who, as the husband is "head of the wife," is, in a higher sense, "head over all things to the church."—Ed.

§ The word here translated "worship," is applied either to the divine worship rendered to God, or the civil respect that may be rendered to men. It is not to be supposed that John mistook the angel for Christ, and purposed to offer him divine worship; but merely such honour as eastern manners would have rendered to any superior or instructor. (See 1 Sam. 25. 24; 2 Kings 4. 37; Acts 22. 3.) Yet even against this mark of deference or gratitude the angel guards him, lest it should lead to any substitution of the creature for the Creator.—Ed.

prejudice against the Christian faith. 7, 9. This beginning of the glory of the latter days may be called the marriage and marriage-supper of the Lamb, because Jesus will then publicly avow his relation to his church, convert and espouse multitudes of all nations to himself, and feast them in a spiritual manner upon his new covenant fulness. 8. This robe of fine linen denotes Jesus' imputed righteousness to entitle them to heaven; and the sanctification of their heart and life to render them meet for it; and represents their honour, favour, acceptance, purity, and holiness. 10. I am nothing but a mere creature like yourself, commissioned by Christ to make known the things relating to his person, cause, and government, and the revolutions he will make in the church and world; and the testimony which I have borne to him has been dictated to me by the same divine Spirit which inspired the ancient prophets. 11—14. The white horses, upon which Christ and his army ride to conquer Antichrist, denote their high honour and certain success and triumph; and represent the glorious and everlasting gospel, which shall then prevail more extensively and successfully than ever before, with light and purity, speed and power, in its last promulgation through the earth. 12. His many crowns denote his natural and mediatorial authority and universal dominion over the church and all the world, in all spiritual and temporal concerns, and his subduing all nations and things to himself.—No creature knew anything of his name, as Son of God or mediator, till it was revealed; and none can ever fully and comprehensively understand it. 13. He is rendered distinguished and glorious by the blood of his vanquished and slaughtered enemies. 15. His sharp sword and iron rod denote his dreadful threatenings and righteous judgments on idolatrous, persecuting, and wicked nations. His treading the wine-press denotes his squeezing and crushing his enemies into death and ruin by the terrible impressions of his heavy, infinite, and irresistible wrath. 16. His having his name, KING OF KINGS and LORD OF LORDS, on his vesture and thigh, imports that, by his mighty acts, he effectually and illustriously proves himself Sovereign Lord and Ruler of all the potentates, princes, and nobles, of the world, to govern, influence, restrain, save, or destroy them, or to work by or upon them, as he pleases. 17—21. According to Christ's awful threatenings, and by his influence, the whole power of Antichrist, civil and ecclesiastical, is totally ruined; and, while the souls of its wicked supporters are cast into hell, the ravenous beasts feed on the slain carcasses, and the saints of God divide the spoil, and with great satisfaction rejoice in this righteous vengeance, as it manifests the glory of God's perfections, and opens the way for the happiest and most glorious state of the church on earth.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIX.—High praises to God, and abundant happiness and honour to saints, attend his remarkable deliverances of his gospel church: and none more than his extirpation of Popery, and introduction of the latter-day glory! Yea, in a most awful manner, the calamities, and even the infernal torments, of the wicked, afford matter of praise to saints and glory to God.—Jesus' righteousness imputed, and his grace implanted and exercised, are the great ornaments of his people; while their union to, and fellowship with him, and his almighty power, unblemished faithfulness, sovereign and universal dominion, great salvation, and glorious triumph, gladden their hearts. But dreadful is their danger, and certain their ruin, who oppose him and his interests. In full hopes that all our tribulations will end, and all our enemies perish for ever, let us, who fear and serve the Lord, praise his name, both small and great. Let us believe his infallible promises, worship him only, and follow him whithersoever he goes. Grace shall reign through righteousness to our eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord.

witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years.*

5 But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection.†

6 Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years.

7 And when the thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison,

8 And shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle: the number of whom is as the sand of the sea.

9 And they went up on the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city: and fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them.

10 And the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever.

11 And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them.

12 And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God: and the books were opened; and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works.

13 And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell* delivered up the dead which were in them: and they were judged every man according to their works.

14 And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire.† This is the second death.

15 And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire.

* Are these thousand years literal or prophetic? In the midst of such an array of unquestionable emblems, it seems impossible, by any rule of interpretation, to understand them as literally "a thousand;" but, taken prophetically, and according to the wont of this book—a day for a year—they represent 360,000 years, a period which some deem so long as to appear inadmissible. Let it, however, be recollected, that from Adam to Christ was but 75 generations, (Luke 3. 23—38); that, calculating generations, not by antediluvian, but by Abrahamic life, 78 years must yet run before 42 generations can be added, making in all 117 generations since the creation. Then, let it be recollected, that Jehovah is described (Ex. 20. 6,) as "keeping mercy for thousands," even for thousands of generations—that he has "commanded his word to a thousand generations," (Ps. 105. 8),—"and the Scripture cannot be broken," (John 10. 35), neither does the Spirit of truth speak in vain and boastful hyperboles—and the length of time thus allotted to the happy condition of the church will appear in no-wise disproportionate to the announcement of other Scriptures.—Ed.

† Is not "the first resurrection" that of which Paul speaks, when he describes believers (Col. 2. 12), as "buried with (Christ) in baptism, wherein also (they) are risen with him, through the faith of the operation of God;" and, on the ground of which, he exhorts them—"If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above," (Col. 3. 1.)? And does it not appear to correspond with the resurrection vision of Ezekiel 37. 1—14, which the Spirit immediately expounds of the gathering of Judah and Israel into one nation, and their final restoration to their own land, where the "sanctuary shall be in the midst of them for ever.—Ed.

* By "the new heaven and the new earth," several distinguished expositors understand, the renovated state of kingdoms and churches during "the thousand years" preceding the final judgment. The following reason seems, however, to lead to the conclusion, that they represent the renovated world (2 Pet. 3. 7—13,) after that judgment. The reason stands thus:—The time at which "the earth and the heavens fled away," was when the Judge took his seat on "the great white throne," (comp. ch. 20. 11, with ch. xi. 1,) and the dead, "small and great," stood before him, and were "judged according to their works," (ver. 12), and "death and hell were cast into the lake of fire;" consequently after these events there could be no more judgment. But it is evident that after "the thousand years" there will be the terrific judgment of Gog and Magog, (ch. 20. 3, 7, 9, 10), therefore it follows, that this vision of the "new heaven and new earth" must represent a period posterior to the final judgment.—Ed.

term thousand is taken, Deut. i. 11; vii. 9; & xxxii. 30; Psal. xc. 4; xci. 7; & cv. 8; Eccl. vi. 6; Isa. xxx. 17; & lx. 22; 2 Pet. iii. 8; I cannot determine. The glory and happiness of this thousand years' reign of the saints is to be understood, not literally, but spiritually and figuratively, according to the common style of the book. It could not consist with the happiness of the saints, to leave the heavenly mansions, and live in bodies needing meat and drink; nor, if their bodies were raised spiritual and incorruptible, would they need any such thing; and in vain would Satan instigate the wicked to war against, and cut off, spiritual and incorruptible bodies. The dead in Christ are also represented as all rising together at the last day. And a proper resurrection is never in scripture represented as a reviving or living again of the soul, but of the body. The resurrection of the martyrs' and confessors' souls here spoken of must therefore mean, not the resurrection of these deceased persons, but the remarkable reformation, deliverance, comfort, and activity, of the church in their successors. Rom. xi. 15; Ezek. xxxvii. 1—14; Psal. lxxxv. 6; Hos. vi. 2, 3; Zech. x. 1.—And as Elijah is represented as living in John Baptist, Matth. xi. 14; & xvii. 12; Luke i. 17; and Antichristian Rome is called in this book Sodom, Egypt, and Babylon, on account of her likeness to them in luxury, cruelty, pride, and idolatry; ch. xi. 8; xiv. 8; xvi. 19; xvii. 5; & xviii. 2, 21; so the ancient martyrs will live in the Christians of this period, being united to the same head, members of the same body, and of the same temper, faith, patience, zeal, and fortitude, and professing the same gospel truths. And this restoration of the church to this peaceable and glorious state, after a long death under the reign of Antichrist, in which multitudes of Jews and Gentiles shall be converted to Christ, and shall enjoy much spiritual, delightful, and honourable fellowship with Christ and with one another, and have the governing power in the earth, is called the first resurrection, as it is a figure and pledge of the general resurrection of the saints to eternal life at the last day. The wicked will not live again till the end of the thousand years; that is, they will be reduced to the same condition in which Christ's slain witnesses were a little before, ch. xi. 7—9, having no authority, power, or activity, to make head against Christ and his cause. 8—10. Perhaps Gog and Magog may here include the wicked everywhere in the world, instigated by Satan to imbolden their spirits, and combine in a furious and desperate attack upon the church, which shall issue in a manner no less dreadful than the last efforts of Antichrist. 11. The opening of the books, and judging men according to them, denotes that, in the last judgment, the infinite and all-observing knowledge and exact remembrance of God, the extensive notice and exact recording of men's own consciences, and the whole contents of God's revelations and purposes, will be clearly manifested, and all men righteously judged exactly answerable thereto. 13, 14. By hell may be understood the state of separate spirits; and death and hell are cast into the lake of fire, when the bodies and souls of all the wicked are shut up in hell, and there is no vestige of sin or misery left anywhere else in the creation of God.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XX.—Glorious is the period of light, life, liberty, love, peace, purity, joy, and triumph, which the church of true believers shall enjoy even on earth, after a long, long night of darkness, trouble, and oppression. When Satan is restrained by Christ, and the Holy Ghost poured out; with what power, spirituality, and splendour shall the cause of Christ revive! They, who in evil times had faithfully adhered to the truth, shall, in their persons, or in the numerous multitudes of their converted successors, live and reign under the protection and smiles of their Redeemer. But no happiness on earth is unmovable or everlasting. Satan and his wicked instruments will always disturb the beloved saints and city of the Lord, to their utmost; but quickly shall their most furious and joint attacks issue in their universal and everlasting destruction. In what a public and awful manner the general resurrection and last judgment will shut up the scenes of time! How great and glorious the Judge! how tremendous the tribunal! how numerous and serious the pannels! how exact the trial! Just, but awful and irrevocable, shall be the decisions, and infinitely important and lasting the execution.

* Twelve thousand furlongs—being equal to 1500 miles, it seems difficult to comprehend how "the height of it" could be "equal," especially as the measure of the wall is immediately given (and most probably in height, see ver. 12), as "a hundred forty and four cubits" or about 200 feet. The meaning seems to be, that this emblematic city was represented as built on the "great and high mountain," to which the spirit had carried the prophet (ver. 10), and that the height of the mountain was equal to the side of the city.—Ed.

18 [a]And the building of the wall of it was of jasper: and the city was pure gold, like unto clear glass.

Her being measured denotes her conformity to the oracles of God. Her four-square form denotes her perfection, stability, and uniformity. Her twelve foundations of different precious stones are the infinitely precious Redeemer in his unnumbered excellencies and glories, answerable to the different cases of men. The houses being built, and streets paved, with pure gold, represent its amazing riches, glory, and purity. 22, 23. In heaven they have no need of instituted ordinances, or of created comforts, as the immediate enjoyment of God in Christ renders them perfectly happy; and even in the millennial state there will be no need of ceremonies or external pomp, &c., as the powerful presence of Christ and his Father will render ordinances delightful, and men satisfied with their lot. 24, 26. In the millennial state church members will improve their wealth, honour, and power, for the glory of Christ and the benefit of souls; and in heaven they will have inexpressibly greater glories and honours than could be had on earth, and shall receive the gracious reward of their right improvement of the benefits they received on earth. 25. Gates never shut denote perfect safety and perpetual freedom of access.—No night is no darkness, ignorance, or trouble.

Reflections upon Chap. XXI.—Transcendent are the glories of the millennial, but especially of the heavenly, state of the church. Spiritual light, beauty, honour, grandeur, wealth, safety, satisfaction, and pleasure, meet together. How new is all, far surpassing anything found or imagined before; and gloriously and firmly founded on Jesus Christ, and correspondent to the doctrine of his apostles and prophets! Abundant, delightful, and glorious, is the access into this state by him, as the door, the way, the truth, and the life. Multitudes, chosen and redeemed, called and faithful, of all ranks, Jews and Gentiles, are admitted into it. And in what honour they appear therein as the beloved, the espoused, bride of Christ! Complete, secure, and immortal, is their blessedness, where sin, darkness, trouble, and death, are fully and for ever passed away. Familiar and immediate is their fellowship with, and enjoyment of, God: and pure and glorious their holiness in heart and life.—But, alas! how inexpressible is the misery of those wicked and impenitent sinners, who, by the purpose, the word, the providence of God, are for ever excluded therefrom!

Chap. XXII.—Ver. 1, 2. The Holy Ghost, proceeding from, and sent by, Christ and his Father, in his graces and comforts, and abundantly enjoyed is, the river of life. Jesus Christ, in his person, offices, relations, and manifold bles-

AND he showed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb.

2 In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life,* which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations.

3 And there shall be no more curse: but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and his servants shall serve him:

4 And they shall see his face; and his name shall be in their foreheads.

5 And there shall be no night there: and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God giveth them light: and they shall reign for ever and ever.

6 And he said unto me, These sayings are faithful and true: and the Lord God of the holy prophets sent his angel to show unto his servants the things which must shortly be done.

7 Behold, I come quickly: blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book.

8 And I John saw these things, and heard them. And when I had heard and seen, I fell down to worship before the feet of the angel† which showed me these things.

9 Then saith he unto me, See thou do it not: for I am thy fellow-servant, and of thy brethren the prophets, and of them which keep the sayings of this book: worship God.

10 And he saith unto me, Seal not the sayings of the prophecy of this book: for the time is at hand.‡

11 He that is unjust, let him be unjust still; and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still; and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still; and he that is holy, let him be holy still.

12 [a]And, behold, I come quickly; and [b]my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be.

13 [c]I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last.

14 [d]Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have [e]right to [f]the tree of life, and may enter in through [g]the gates into the city.

15 [h]For without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie.

16 [i]I Jesus have sent mine angel to testify unto you these things in the churches. I am [k]the root* and the offspring of David, and the bright and morning star.

17 And the [l]Spirit and the bride† say, Come. And let [m]him that heareth say, Come. [n]And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely.

18 For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, °If any man shall add‡ unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book:

19 And if any man shall take away§ from the words of the book of this prophecy, [p]God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book.

20 [q]He which testifieth these things saith, [r]Surely I come quickly; [s]Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus.

21 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

* If "the tree of life" be here put, not for a single tree, but for a species—according to a common form of speech—then it is easy to see how it might be "on either side of the river." And this view would correspond with the parallel passage Ezek. 47. 7, where were "seen many trees on one side and on the other" of the bank. But, if this view be considered inadmissible, then a new translation, which fully accords with the original, will solve the difficulty:—"In midst of the street of it, and of the river (which flowed) on either side (around it, was) a tree of life," &c. Thus the image presented is a wide street, with a river flowing down the centre, which divides to form an island, where the tree of life grows in all its beauty and fruitfulness.—Ed.

† When John "fell down to worship before the feet of the angel," as he had formerly done, (ch. 19. 10.) it is not to be imagined that he mistook him for the Lord, or intended to render him any species of divine worship. To have so intended would have indicated a determinate, or apparently incurable tendency to idolatry totally inconsistent with John's education as a Jew, and his principles as a Christian apostle. He merely purposed to offer him civil respect as a divinely commissioned teacher. But if the angel refused even this civil worship, how foolish are they, who offer to angels divine worship. And if the angel of Jesus refused to allow John thus to worship at his feet, oh! how sinful is he; who, in the name of Jesus, permits, or requires, that his person should be worshipped—that his very feet should be kissed! But see ch. 13. 15.—Ed.

sings, sufficient for the full satisfaction of all the Israel of God, according to the doctrine of the twelve apostles, and whose very words, ordinances, and manifestations of himself, have a sovereign virtue to remove all evil, and render men perfectly happy, is the tree of life. 3—5. The fixed presence of God with his saints, and their familiar and immediate fellowship with him, will render them like to him in holiness and happiness. 6. All these things which you have heard and seen shall be faithfully and infallibly accomplished in their time and order; and the Lord Jesus, who inspired and authorized his ancient prophets to foretell events, hath sent me, your conducting angel, to inform you, and others of his servants under the New Testament, of the glories which will soon begin, and, in the short period of time, be all fulfilled. 9. Pay me no religious homage; for I, though an angel, am but your fellow-servant, and a companion of other prophets and those who fear God, employed by Christ to communicate these revelations to you. 10. Christ charged me to publish to the church the revelations I had received, as their accomplishment was immediately to begin. 14. They who, from a principle of faith and love, sincerely obey all God's commandments, and thus prove their union to Christ, shall, by his free grant, have all authority, warrant, dignity, and meetness, to partake of the immediate enjoyment of him in all his heavenly blessings, and have a free, open, abundant, and honourable admission into the heavenly state. 16. As God, Christ is the Root, Lord, and Source of David's family and kingdom; and, as man, he is his Son, descended from his loins. He is the bright and morning star: as he is infinitely glorious, and his rising up in his incarnation introduced the gospel-day; his rising in power introduces the millennial day; his rising in the saving influences of his Spirit introduces the spiritual day of grace and comfort; and his appearance to judge the world will introduce the eternal day of light, purity, and joy. 17. The first part of this verse is the church's request that Christ would come quickly to fulfil all his gracious promises; and the last part is an invitation to sinful men to come and freely receive his promised blessings. 19. God, by withholding all saving blessings from him, shall manifest that he never was elected, and shall cut him off from all the interest he professed, hoped, or seemed, to have in his gracious purpose, true church, or inspired promises.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXII.—Happy are they who enjoy the millennial, and especially the heavenly blessedness! their freedom from curses, sorrows, and maladies is complete. Ravishing and abundant is their enjoyment of Jesus Christ and his Spirit, and all his purchased salvation,—all the consolations, all the fulness of God in him. Divinely acknowledged and immediately illuminated, they reign with him for evermore! And with uninterrupted delight and fervour they serve, worship, and glorify him!—But none must expect this celestial happiness without being justified and sanctified on earth. Holiness in heart or life, though it does not merit the heavenly glory, must prepare us for it, and manifest our new covenant claim to it. And if men persevere in their sin, they must at last be excluded from the fellowship of God, and be for ever fixed in their sin as a principal part of their punishment. Important and infallible are the declarations of Christ in the Scripture. According to them as our rule we must now walk; and according to them at the last day we shall be judged. Infinite is the danger of adding to, taking from, perverting, or denying, these sacred records. And great is the mercy, that they are so full of the most encouraging promises and endearing invitations to receive an undoubted, a free, a full, an everlasting salvation in Christ. In the exercise of an assured faith let me always receive his fulness, and look, long, and wait, for his second coming!—O when shall time give place to eternity! When shall the transient glimmerings of his glory issue in my being for ever with the Lord! When shall my beloved ordinances of his grace, and this precious, precious, precious book of God be exchanged for seeing him as he is, and knowing him even as I am known in the face of Jesus Christ! When shall I bid adieu to human explications of divine oracles, and the Lord God and the Lamb be the light thereof,—my everlasting light, and my God my glory!

A COLLECTION OF THE PROPHECIES WHICH CONCERN THE CALLING OF THE JEWS. AND THE GLORY WHICH SHALL BE IN THE LATTER DAYS.

1. The Jews shall be gathered from all parts of the earth where they are now scattered, and brought home into their own land. For this, see Is. xi. 11; xxvii. 12, 13; xliii. 5, 6; xlix. 11, 12; lx. 4.

Compare Jer. iii. 18; xvi. 14, 15; xxiii. 3; xxx. 10; xxxi. 7, 8, 10; xxxii. 37.

So Hos. xi. 10, 11; Zeph. iii. 10; Zech. viii. 7, 8; and x. 8—10.

2. They shall be carried by the Gentiles unto their place, who shall join themselves with the Jews, and become the Lord's people, Is. xlix. 22; xiv. 12; lx. 9; lxvi. 19, 20; ii. 2—4.

Compare Jer. iii. 17; xvi. 19; Ezek. xlvii. 22, 23; Mic. v. 3; Zech. ii. 11; viii. 20—23.

3. Great miracles shall be wrought when Israel is restored, as formerly when they were brought out of Egypt, viz.

1. Drying up the river Euphrates, Is. xi. 15, 16; Zech. x. 11; Rev. xvi. 12; Hos. ii. 15; Mic. vii. 15.
2. Causing rivers to flow in desert places, Is. xli. 17—19; xlviii. 20, 21; xliii. 9, 20.
3. Giving them prophets, Is. lxvi. 18—21; Hos. xii. 9, 10.
4. The Lord Christ himself shall appear at the head of them, Is. xxxv. 8; lii. 12; lviii. 8; Hos. i. 10, 11; Mic. ii. 12, 13.

4. The Jews being restored and converted to the faith of Christ, shall be formed into a state, and have judges and counsellors over them as formerly: the Lord Christ himself being their king, who shall then also be acknowledged king over all the earth, Is. i. 26; lx. 17; compare Jer. xxiii. 4; xxx. 8, 9, 21; Hos. iii. 5; Ezek. xxxiv. 23, 24; xxxvii. 24, 25; Is. liv. 5; Obad. ver. 21; Zech. xiv. 5, 9; Ps. xxii. 27, 28.

5. They shall have the victory over all their enemies, and all kings and nations of the earth shall submit unto them. For which see Is. xi. 13, 14; xli. 14—16; xlix. 23; lx. 12; xxv. 10—12; Joel iii. 7, 8, 19, 20; Obad. ver. 17, 18; Mic. iv. 6—8, 11—13; v. 5—7; vii. 16, 17; Zech. ii. 13; ix. 13—15; x. 5, 6; xii. 6; Num. xxiv. 17; Is. xlix. 23; lx. 10—16; lxvi. 19, 20.

6. The Jews restored shall live peaceably, without being divided into nations, or contending with one another any more, Is. xi. 13, 14; xiv. 1, 2; Jer. iii. 18; l. 4; Ezek. xxxvii. 21, 22; Hos. i. 11.

1. They shall be very numerous, and multiply greatly, Is. xxvii. 6; xliv. 3, 4; xlix. 18—21; liv. 1—3; lxi. 9; Jer. xxiii. 3; xxx. 18—20; xxxi. 27; Ezek. xxxiv. 11; xxxvi. 38, 39.
2. They shall have great peace, safety, and outward temporal prosperity, Is. xxxii. 16—18; xxxiii. 24; liv. 13—17; lx. 18, 21; Jer. xxiii. 3—6; xxx. 10; xxxii. 34—41; xxxiii. 6—9; l. 19, 20; Joel iii. 17, 18; Mic. vii. 18—20; Zeph. iii. 13; Zech. iii. 9, 10.
3. They shall be very glorious, and a blessing in the whole earth, Is. xix. 24, 25; lxi. 9; Jer. xxxiii. 3, 9; Ezek. xxxiv. 26; Zeph. iii. 19, 20; Zech. viii. 13.

7. The land of Judea shall be made eminently fruitful, like a paradise, or the garden of God, Is. xxix. 17; xxxv. 1, 2, 7, 9; li. 3, 16; liv. 11—13; lv. 12, 13; lx. 17; lxv. 17, 25; Ezek. xxxiv. 26, 27; xxxvi. 37; Joel iii. 18; Amos ix. 13, 14.

8. Jerusalem shall be rebuilt, and after the full restoration of the Jews, shall never be destroyed nor infested with enemies any more, Is. lii. 1; xxvi. 1; lx. 18; xxxiii. 6; Joel iii. 17; Obad. ver. 17; Zech. xiv. 10, 11; Jer. xxxi. 38—40; Ezek. xxxviii. 11.

9. A little before the time of the Jews' call and conversion, there shall be great wars, and confusion, and desolation, throughout all the earth, Is. xxxiv. throughout; Joel iii. 1, 10; Zeph. iii. 8, 9; Ezek. xxviii. 25, 26; Hag. ii. 21—23; Jer. xxx. 7—10; 2 Chr. xv. 3—7. So that we may say, as Balaam did, prophesying of that very time, Alas, who shall live when God doth this? Num. xxiv. 23.

DAYS OF THE WEEK.

1 Day of the Week	Sunday
2 Day	Monday.
3 Day	Tuesday.
4 Day	Wednesday.
5 Day	Thursday.
6 Day	Friday.
7 Day or Sabbath	Saturday.

HOURS OF THE DAY.

1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6.
Morning, from 6 to 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12.
Afternoon, from 12 to 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6.

WATCHES.

The first Watch, from Evening to nine at Night.
The second or middle Watch, from Nine to Midnight.
The third Watch, or Cock-crowing, from Midnight till Three in the Morning.
The fourth, or Morning Watch, from Three till Morning.

A TABLE OF OFFICES AND CONDITIONS OF MEN.

Patriarchs, or fathers of families, such as Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and his sons.
Judges, temporary supreme governors, immediately appointed by God over the children of Israel.
Kings, and they either of the whole nation, or after the falling off of the ten tribes, of Judah or Israel.
Elders, senators, the LXX. or Sanhedrim.
Officers, provosts, sheriffs, or executioners.
Judges, inferior rulers, such as determine controversies in particular cities.
Israelites, Hebrews, descendants from Jacob.
An Hebrew of the Hebrews, an Israelite by original extraction.
A Proselyte of the Covenant, who was circumcised, and submitted to the whole law.
A Proselyte of the Gate, or stranger, who worshipped one God, but remained uncircumcised.

OFFICERS UNDER THE ASSYRIAN OR PERSIAN MONARCHS.

Tirshatha, or Governor appointed by the kings of Assyria or Persia.
Heads of the Captivity, the Chief of each tribe or family, who exercised a precarious government during the captivity.

UNDER THE GRECIAN MONARCHS, SUPERIOR OFFICERS.

Maccabees, the successors of Judas Maccabeus, high priests, who presided with kingly power.

UNDER THE ROMAN EMPERORS.

Presidents, or governors, sent from Rome with imperial power.
Tetrarchs, who had kingly power in four provinces.
Proconsuls, or deputies of provinces.

INFERIOR OFFICERS.

Publicans, or tax-gatherers.
Centurions, captains of a hundred men.

ECCLESIASTICAL OFFICERS, OR SECTS OF MEN.

High Priests, who only might enter the Holy of Holies.
Second Priests, or Sagan, who supplied the high priest's office, in case he were disabled.
High Priests for the War, set apart for the occasion of an expedition.
Priests, Levites of the sons of Aaron, divided into twenty-four ranks, each rank serving weekly in the temple.
Levites, of the tribe of Levi, but not of Aaron's family; of these were three orders, Gershonites, Kohathites, Merarites, several sons of Levi.
Nethinims, inferior servants to the Priests and Levites, (not of their tribe,) to draw water and cleave wood, &c.
Prophets, anciently called Seers, who foretold future events, and denounced God's judgments.
Children of the Prophets, their disciples or scholars.
Wise Men, called so in imitation of the Eastern Magi, or Gentile philosophers.
Scribes, writers and expounders of the law.
Disputers, that raised and determined questions out of the law.
Rabbies or Doctors, teachers of Israel.
Libertines, freed men of Rome, who, being Jews or prosyletes, had a synagogue or oratory for themselves.
Gaulonites or Galileans, who pretended it unlawful to obey a heathen magistrate.
Herodians, who shaped their religion to the times, and particularly flattered Herod.
Epicureans, who placed all happiness in pleasure.
Stoics, who denied the liberty of the will, and pretended all events were determined by fatal necessity.
Simon Magus, author of the heresy of the Gnostics, who taught that men, however vicious their practice was, should be saved by their knowledge.
Nicolaitans, the disciples of Nicolas, one of the first seven deacons, who taught the community of wives.
Nazarites, who under a vow abstained from wine.
Nazarenes, Jews professing Christianity.
Zelotes, Sicarii, or Murderers, who, under pretence of the law, thought themselves authorized to commit any outrage.
Pharisees, separatists, who, upon the opinion of their own godliness, despised all others.
Sadducees, who denied the resurrection of the dead, angels, and spirits.
Samaritans, mongrel professors, partly heathens and partly Jews, the offspring of the Assyrians sent to Samaria.
Apostles, missionaries, or persons sent; they who were sent by our Saviour, from their number, were called The Twelve.
Bishops, successors of the Apostles in the government of the church.
Deacons, officers chosen by the Apostles to take care of the poor.

TABLES

OF THE

MEASURES, WEIGHTS, MONIES, AND TIMES, MENTIONED IN SCRIPTURE;

WITH AN APPENDIX, CONTAINING THE METHOD OF CALCULATING SCRIPTURAL MEASURES OF SURFACE.

A MEASURE is a known quantity, applied to another of the same kind that is less known, to make its dimensions better known, by help of numbers expressing the proportion that the known quantity bears to the unknown. The dimensions to be measured are three:—1. Mere Length, which hath but one dimension. 2. Surface, which consists of lengths multiplied into breadth; so it hath two dimensions, as it were interwoven; and this is always measured by some square surface already known, as by a square foot or a square cubit, or any other square already known by help of its side. Moses generally useth the square cubit. 3. Solidity or Capacity, which hath three dimensions multiplied into each other; length, breadth, and height or depth. This is measured by a known cube. From solidity ariseth weight in all sublunary bodies; and by weight we measure the value of coins. Therefore I shall join weights and coins together in the fourth table.

use = to signify Equal; :: to express Proportion; . is called Separatrix, parting Decimals from Integers.

TABLE I. MEASURES OF LENGTH.

I express the Cubit and its Parts both by Inch Measure, and by Foot Measure; which I deduce from Inches by this Proportion:

	Inch Meas.	Foot Meas.
	A. 12. 1. : : 21.888	1.824
	Inch. Dec.	Foot Dec.
A Cubit is = to	21.888 =	1.824
A Span the longer = half a Cubit = to	10.944 =	.912
Span the less = one-third of a Cubit = to	7.296 =	.608
A Hand's Breadth = one-sixth of a Cubit = to	3.684 =	.304
Finger's Breadth = one-twenty-fourth of a Cubit = to	.912 =	.076

Measures of many Cubits' Length I express only in Foot Measure.

		Feet decim.
A Fathom .	= 4 Cubits .	= 7.296
Ezekiel's Reed .	= 6 Cubits .	= 10.944
Schœnus, the Egyptian line for Land Measure, which I think Scripture useth to divide inheritances; Ps. xvi. 6, and lxxvii. 55. They used different lengths; but the shortest and most useful was	Cubits. = 80	= 145.92.

Herodotus mentions a Schœnus just 300 times as long; I judge that all the greater were made in proportion to the least.

The Mile . . . . . = 4000 Cubits = 7296 Feet.
Stadium, one-tenth of their Mile = 400 Cubits = 729.6
Parasang, 3 of their Miles = 1200 Cubits = 4 English Miles, and 580 feet.
Five Stadia, or two thousand Cubits, made a Sabbath-day's journey.
Ten Stadia or four thousand Cubits, made an Eastern Mile.
Twenty-four Eastern Miles, or ninety-six thousand Cubits, equal to thirty-three miles, one hundred and seventy-two paces, four feet English, made a day's journey.

TABLE II. MEASURES OF SURFACE.

Moses hath described these by square cubits. I here express them reduced to our square feet. The method of this reduction is taught in an Appendix. I first propose three clear examples given by Moses; secondly, I place six instances of greater difficulty.

The clearest examples are,

I. The Altar of Incense. Only two sides of it, viz., its length and breadth, are expressed by Moses; each of them is affirmed to be one cubit. Yet he declares that it was four square; whence we collect that it was just one square cubit. See Exod. xxx. 2. Now it is demonstrated in the Appendix, that one Jewish square cubit amounts to in surface 3 English square feet, and about 47 square inches.

II. The Table of Showbread; Exod. xxv. 23. It is affirmed to be two cubits in length, and one in breadth. None doubt but it was rectangular, containing two Jewish square cubits. These amount to above 6 English square feet and above a half, viz., 94 square inches.

III. The Boards of the Tabernacle, each ten cubits in length, and one and a half in breadth, Exod. xxvi. 16, being rectangular, must contain 15 Jewish square cubits. These are proved to contain very near 50 square feet of English measure.

The more difficult cases reserved to the Appendix are,

I. The Mercy-seat whose surface is = 12 square feet and a half.

II. A general Method is taught of reducing any given number of Jewish cubits to English square feet.

III. The example of the 15 square cubits in the boards of the tabernacle is made clearer.

IV. The Court of the Tabernacle, described Exod. xxvii. 18, is found to be just half the Egyptian Aroura, and to contain 1 rood, 21 perches, 27 square feet, &c.

V. The whole Auroura is determined, and reduced to our English measure, 3 roods, 2 perches, 55 square feet.

VI. The suburbs, or glebe land, given to each city of the Levites, Num. xxxv. 3-5, is showed to be a square, on each of the four sides of every city, containing a million of Jewish square cubits, or 100 Arourœ; which amount to in each square 76 acres, 1 rood, 20 perches, 80 square feet; whence we collect, that all the four squares amounted to 305 acres, 2 roods, 1 perch, beside 51 feet square.

TABLE III. MEASURES OF CAPACITY.

	Wine gal.	Pints.	Sol. inch.
Epha or Bath	7 —	4 —	15
Chomer, Homer in our translation	75 —	5 —	7
Seah one-third of an Epha .	2 —	4 —	3
Hin = one-sixth of an Epha .	1 —	2 —	1
Omer one-tenth of an Epha .	0 —	6 —	0.5
Cab one-eighteenth of an Epha .	0 —	3 —	10
Log one seventy-second of an Epha	0 —	0½ —	10
Metretes of Syria (John ii. 6.) = Cong. Rom.	0 —	7⅛ —	0
Cotyla, Eastern, one-hundredth of an Epha	0 —	0½ —	3

This Cotyla contains just ten ounces Avoirdupois of rain water; Omer 100; Epha 1000; Chomer 10,000. So by these weights all these measures of capacity may be expeditiously recovered very near exactness.

TABLE IV. OF WEIGHTS AND COINS.

The Jewish Weights are reduced to the standard grains of our Troy weight, whereof 438 are equal to the Roman Ounce, and to our ancient English Avoirdupois ounce.

TABLE V. OF TIMES.

The Jewish hours were introduced about the time of their captivity in Babylon. Their ordinary ones were of the same length as ours. Their day, beginning at six o'clock in the morning, they divided into twelve hours; of which our nine o'clock in the morning was the third, our noon their sixth, our three o'clock afternoon their ninth, and our five o'clock their eleventh But they seem also to have at last divided their day into four great hours or watches, each containing three of the ordinary ones; and of these their third hour was from noon to three o'clock. Their NIGHT they divided into four watches, each consisting of three hours. The first ended about nine o'clock, the second at midnight, the third at three o'clock or cock-crowing, and the fourth about six o'clock in the morning. Their WEEK, copied from God's example in the creation of the world, began on our Sabbath, and ended on Saturday. Their MONTHS were regulated by the changes of the moon; and each third year consisted of thirteen of these months or moons; their names were,

1 Abib or Nisan	answering to	March / April	7 Ethanim, or Tizri	answering to	September / October
2 Zif, or Jair		April / May	8 Bul, or Marchesuan		October / November
3 Sivan		May / June			November
4 Thamuz		June / July	9 Chisleu.		December
5 Ab		July / August	10 Thebeth		December / January
6 Elul		August / September	11 Shebeth		January / February
			12 Adar		February
			13 Veader		March

Their CIVIL YEAR, originating from the creation of the world, began with Ethanim or Tizri, in our September; and by it their releases and jubilees were regulated. Their SACRED YEAR, originating from their deliverance from the Egyptian bondage, Exod. xii., began with Abib or Nisan, in our March.

AN APPENDIX

To the Second Table of Measures of Surface described by Moses, showing the Method of reducing them by Calculations to the measures used in England, for the Benefit of those that understand Decimal Arithmetic, and desire to try the Reductions given in the Table, or to make further Improvements in this kind of Measures.

I. THE MERCY-SEAT.

I shall begin with reduction of the measures of the mercy-seat, which was God's throne of grace among the Jews. Moses, in Exod. xxv. 17, affirms, that its length was two cubits and a half, its breadth one cubit and a half. The fractions adhering to its length and breadth make some difficulty to beginners in arithmetic, which the decimal way doth much abate. Supposing, therefore, what I have elsewhere proved, that the Jewish cubit was a foot measure 1.824; the length must be expressed in foot measure, and decimals thereof, 4.560. The breadth in like measure will be 2.736. Wherefore the product of these numbers multiplied into each other gives its surface 12.47616; in number of its square feet, and decimals thereof, 12 square feet, and very near half a square foot. If the decimals had been 50, it had just been half a foot. If we desire to express those decimals of a foot in square inches, as is usual in England, we must multiply .47616 by 144, the square inches of a foot, and the product will be 68.56704; which shows that the decimals we found amount to 68 square inches, and about half an inch more: we need not be nicer.

II. A SQUARE CUBIT REDUCED TO OUR MEASURE.

2. In the altar of incense Moses describes the Jewish square cubit, which must be reduced to our foot measure, thus, 1.824× 1.824. The product of these numbers multiplied will be the upper surface of this altar, 3.326976, that is, 3 square feet, and .326976 decimals of a square foot, which we may express by 47 square inches and a few decimals of an inch square inconsiderable.

III. THE BOARDS OF THE TABERNACLE.

3. Moses' description of the boards of the tabernacle, Exod. xxvi. 16, by ten cubits in length, and one and a half in breadth, naturally leads a man to discern in each board's surface 15 Jewish square cubits; because, if we conceive a line drawn from the end of one cubit at the bottom of the board to the end of one cubit at the top of the board, this must needs be 10 whole square cubits on one side of that line, and ten half square cubits (= to 5 whole) on the other side of that line; here, therefore, are 15 square cubits. The reduction of these into English square feet is performed by multiplying 15, viz., the number of cubits given, into 3.326976, the feet and decimals of one square cubit, and the product will be 49.90464, and that is very near to 50 square feet; for those decimals amount to above 130 square inches, and a little more than 13 square inches would make it just 50 feet; which abatement we need not here regard.

IV. THE COURT OF THE TABERNACLE.

4. Let us now go to the measure of the surface of land. But we will begin with the court of the tabernacle, the ground on which the priests performed all the solemn public worship of Israel in Moses' time. The area of this court is described by Moses, Exod. xxvii. 18, by its length 100 cubits, and its breadth everywhere 50 cubits. Wherefore this area must be in Jewish measure 5000 square cubits, for that is the product of 100 multiplied into 50. To reduce these 5000 Jewish cubits into English square feet, I must multiply 5000 into 3.326976, the product is 16,634.88 English square feet.

But in cases of such long numbers of feet, we use, for brevity's sake and to help our memories, to reduce them into perches, or roods, or acres, which contain known numbers of square feet. A perch contains 272 square feet and one-fourth. A rood is =to 10,890 square feet. An acre is = to 43,560 square feet. It is plain that the number 16,634.88 hath not integers equal to those of an acre; but it hath enough to answer those in a rood, and some overplus; therefore, I must divide 16,634.88 by 10,890, which is a rood. By such division continued in the decimal way, until I have a fraction of five or six places, which is exact enough, I find the quotient to be 1.527537, which assures me that my number 16,634.88 hath but once entirely in it a whole rood, but it hath moreover in it many decimal parts of a rood. These, therefore, I reduce to the perches contained in them, by multiplying them into 40, which is the number of perches that make up a rood: and cutting off six places from the product, which is 21.101480; so I find there are 21 perches entire, and the figures after the separatrix are decimals of a perch. These also I multiply by 272.25, which are the square feet and decimals of a perch. The product of this last multiplication, after eight places cut off from it by the separatrix, because there were six places of decimals in one of the multipliers, and two in the other, is 27.62793000. Hence I learn, that there are therein but 27 entire feet; all the eight decimal places amount to little above half a foot, and therefore I cast them away as inconsiderable in the measure of land. This method of reduction by multiplication of decimals I find to be easier than the common way of reduction by division, and therefere I propose it to be used by beginners in this practice of surveying. So I find this court to contain in English measure 1 rood, 21 perches, 27 feet, and little more than half a foot square. But reflecting upon Moses' measure by cubits, and finding them to be precisely 5000 square cubits, I observed that they were just half 10,000, which I had observed from Herodotus' Euterpe to be the area of the Egyptian Aroura, by which their land was as generally measured as ours is by acres and roods. See Herodot. l. 2. c. 168, I called also to mind a passage in Manetho, an Egyptian priest, cited by Josephus in his first book against Apion, where he affirms, that Manetho, in his history of the reign, wars, and expulsion of the Pastors (whom Africanus affirms to be Phœnicians or Canaanites, and Josephus vainly believed to be Jews), wrote out of the public records of Egypt, that these Pastors made at Abaris a very large and strong encampment, that encompassed 10,000 Arourœ, sufficient to contain 240,000 men, and long enough to maintain their cattle. Hence it appears, that not only the Egyptians, but the Phœnicians or Canaanites also, that had dwelt among them, and had reigned there during the time of six kings successively, used this measure of land called Aroura. Now this was long before Moses' time; for the beginning of Amosis or Tethmosis, who expelled them out of Egypt, was very near the time of Abraham's death, as appears by the annals of the learned Primate of Ireland. Wherefore I believe that Moses, who was skilled in all Egyptian learning, especially surveying, did of choice make the court of the tabernacle to be just half an Aroura, which was a known measure to him and his people, who had long dwelt in Egypt, and Divine authority directed him so to do.

V. THE REDUCTION OF AN AROURA TO ENGLISH MEASURE.

5. Because we have shown from Herodotus, that an Aroura is the square of 100 Jewish or Egyptian cubits, and 100 such cubits may, in English foot measure, be expressed by 182.4 English feet, it follows, that the square of this number will express exactly the number of the English square feet that are contained in an Aroura. Now, by multiplication of 182.4 into itself, I find the product to be 33,269.76; therefore I conclude that there are 33,269 square feet entire, and .76 decimals of a square foot in an Aroura. Now, to reduce these English square feet into roods, perches, and the remainder of square feet, I use the method used in the last paragraph: First, I divide them by 10,890, the square feet in a rood, and the quotient I find 3.055074: that is, 3 roods, and .055074 decimals of a rood. Secondly, I multiply these decimals by 40, which is the number of perches in a rood; the product is 2.202960. Hence I conclude there are therein two perches and .292960 decimals of a perch. Thirdly, I multiply these last decimals by 272.25, which are the square feet of a perch. The product is 55.25586000; that is, 55 entire square feet. The eight places of decimals amount to little above one-fourth of a square foot, therefore I reject them as inconsiderable in measure of land. By all these reductions it is found, that an Aroura is in English measure 3 roods, 3 perches, 55¼ square feet. Hence it follows also, that it is not well translated by Jugerum, for it is much larger; nor is it well in English called an Acre, for it is considerably less. To this place I refer the use of the lesser sort of Σχοινος, which yet is most convenient for the use of the Egyptians and of the Jews, to measure out private men's inheritances, by a line which was 80 cubits long. For the length of this line will measure one side of an Aroura, if the other side be 125 cubits long, which is the length of this line, and its half, and 5 cubits above half of it, which they might easily mark in it by a knot or ring; and by this means they might easily lay any number of Arourœ together, all of them rectangular and parallel to each other. Such lines, I suppose, for measure of inheritances, are intimated Ps. lxxviii. 55; and xvi. 6, &c.

VI. THE LEVITES' GLEBE.

6. I shall conclude with an example, amounting, after reduction, to a number of English acres, which measure we have not yet reached to. This I take from Num. xxxv. 3-5. There Moses describes what measure of land the Levites were to be allowed for their cattle, their goods, and all their beasts, on the north-east, south, and west sides of each of their cities; so that the city was to be in the midst of the land belonging to it. This land in our translation is called suburbs, because of its nearness to all their cities. But we must not thence imagine that it means houses and streets adjoining to their cities, in which sense we sometimes use the word suburbs: for Moses plainly tells us they were places for their several sorts of cattle to feed in, such as might also be orchards or gardens for fruits, or perhaps for a little corn, comprehended in the word, their goods. These fields he limits by 1000 cubits; which was just a quarter of an eastern mile, but amounts in mere length to 608 yards English measure, and therefore exceeds a quarter of an English mile by 168 yards in length. But it is certain that cattle cannot feed upon mere length, but this must signify the side of some surface of land bounded thereby; and we must have two sides of some surface given before we can find the area of surface contained. Therefore Moses, ver. 5, tells us, that on each side of each city they must measure 2000 cubits; which will determine no surface, unless we understand it to mean the two sides of a square, bounded on every side by 1000 cubits. These two sides multiplied into each other will produce a square that contains just a million of square cubits, and that is a known and exact measure of just 100 Arourœ. And this shows that the 2000 cubits mentioned, ver. 5, are the two sides of that square, whereof the 1000 mentioned, ver. 4, is one, and may be called the root of the square. This shows the agreement of the two different numbers. The reduction of this million of square cubits will be performed by the same method that I have used before. Therefore, first, I express 1000 Jewish by 1824 English feet, without any separatrix, according to the principles owned in decimal arithmetic; and the square of that number will be 3,326,976 without a separatrix. Secondly, I divide this number by 43,560 which are the square feet of an acre, and find the quotient to be 76.376859, which signify 76 entire acres, and .376859 decimals of an acre. Thirdly, to find what roods are contained in these decimals, I multiply them by four, the number of roods in an acre, and find the quotient to be 1.507436, which proves that there is but one rood in them, and the six figures cut off by the separatrix (because there were six decimals in one of the multipliers) are all decimals of a rood. Fourthly, therefore, to find what perches are in these last decimals, I multiply them by 40, which is the number of perches contained in a rood. The product is 20.297440; hereby I find that there are 20 entire perches, besides the decimals of a perch, placed after the separatrix. Fifthly, to find what square feet are in those last decimals, I multiply them by 272.25, which are the square feet and decimals in a perch, the product is 80.97804, which is 80 square feet, and all the decimals not amounting to a square foot I reject as inconsiderable in measure of land. Thus we have found that this, and every other square on each side of every Levitical city, was prescribed to be 76 acres, 1 rood, 20 perches, 80 square feet in our measure, but was just a million of square cubits in their measure.

To add the four squares belonging to one Levitical city together, the best way would be to take the first quotient that we found in acre measure, viz., 76.376859, and we must multiply it by four, and we shall find, by the method I have used, all the four squares together to amount to 305 acres, 2 roods, 1 perch; we need not take notice of any lesser quantities in this case. We may also by this method find the sum of the acres belonging to all the forty-eight cities of the Levites, and many other improvements in this kind of measuring surfaces.

COMPLETE INDEX, AND CONCISE DICTIONARY,

OF THE

HOLY BIBLE:

IN WHICH THE VARIOUS PERSONS, PLACES, AND SUBJECTS MENTIONED IN IT, ARE ACCURATELY REFERRED TO; AND EVERY DIFFICULT WORD BRIEFLY EXPLAINED.

DESIGNED TO FACILITATE THE CONSULTATION AND STUDY OF THIS SACRED VOLUME.

AARON, [lofty, mountainous, or a teacher] the brother of Moses, and first high-priest of the Israelites;—appointed to assist Moses, Ex. 4. 14—16;—meets him in the wilderness, 4. 27;—goes with him to Pharaoh, 5. 1, &c.;—married, and has four sons, 6. 23;—he, and his sons set apart for the priest's office, 28. 1, &c.; 40. 13;—solemnly consecrated, Lev. 8. 1, &c.;—commanded to burn incense before the Lord every morning and evening, Ex. 30. 7, 8;—to make atonement with the blood of the sin-offering once every year, 10;—makes the golden calf, 32. 1, &c.;—offers for himself, and the people, Lev. 9. 1, &c.;—resignedly held his peace when his two sons were consumed for offering strange fire, 10. 3;—solemnly blesses the people, 9. 22; Num. 6. 23;—he, and Miriam unjustly complain of Moses, 12. 1, &c.;—stayed a plague by going between the living and the dead, 16. 48;—his rod buds, 17. 8;—sins at Meribah, for which he is not allowed to enter Canaan, 20. 7—13;—dies in mount Hor, 20. 28.

Ab, the eleventh month of the Jewish civil year, and the fifth of their sacred, corresponding to part of our July.

Abaddon, and Apollyon, [the destroyer] the former the Hebrew, and the latter the Greek name, of the king of the locusts, Rev. 9. 11.

Abana and Pharpar, two rivers of Damascus, in Syria, 2 Kings 5. 12.

Abarim, a range of hills lying between the rivers Arnon and Jordan, Num. 33. 47, &c. See Nebo, Peor, and Pisgah.

Abba, a Syriac word signifying Father, Mar. 14. 36; Rom. 8. 15; Gal. 4. 6.

Abdon, [servant of judgment] one of the judges of Israel, who left forty sons, and thirty grandsons, Judg. 12. 13, 14.

Abednego, [servant of light] his history, Dan. i. 7; 2. 49; 3. 10, &c.

Abel, [vanity, vapour] the second son of Adam;—a keeper of sheep, Gen. 4. 2;—his sacrifice more acceptable to God than Cain's offering, 4;—killed by his brother Cain, 8;—his blood, or rather the blood of his sacrifice, alluded to as speaking, Heb. 12. 24.

Abettors, or encouragers of crimes accounted guilty, and punished with the principals, Ps. 50. 18; Prov. 13. 20; 2 John 11.

Abiah, [the Lord is my father] the second son of Samuel;—he and his brother judge Israel, 1 Sam. 8. 1;—take bribes, and pervert judgment, 3;—elders complain against them, and ask a king, 5.

Abiathar, [excellent father] a high-priest;—escapes from Saul, 1 Sam. 22. 20;—sent back to Jerusalem with the ark, when David fled from Absalom, 2 Sam. 15. 29;—conspires to make Adonijah king in succession to David his father, 1 Kings 1. 7;—on this account, is thrust out from the priest's office, 2. 26.

Abib, or Nisan [green ears] the first month of the sacred, and the seventh of the civil year, corresponding to our March.

Abigail, [joy of the father] her behaviour to David, 1 Sam. 25. 14, &c.;—married to him, 39;—taken captive, 30. 5;—rescued, 18.

Abihu, [he is my father] his offence and death, Lev. 10. 1, &c.

Abijah, or Abijam, [father of the sea] succeeds Rehoboam, 1 Kings 14. 31; 2 Chr. 13. 1;—conquers Jeroboam, 13, &c.;—his wives and children, 21.

———, the only pious son of Jeroboam, died in early youth, 1 Kings 14. 1—18.

Abilene, a small canton in Syria, between the mountains Libanus and Antilibanus, Luke 3. 1.

Abimelech, [my father the king] king of Gerar, takes Abraham's wife, Gen. 20. 2;—another of the same name takes Isaac's, 26. 7;—makes a treaty with him, 31;—the bastard son of Gideon, his history, Judg. 9. 1;—dies, 54.

Abiram, [father of fraud] he, with his brother Dathan, and Korah, conspired against Moses and Aaron, for which God caused the earth to swallow them alive, Num. 16. 1, &c.

Abishag, [error of my father] cherishes David in his old age, 1 Kings 1. 4;—asked of Solomon for a wife to Adonijah, 2. 21.

Abishai, [father of the present] a noted warrior;—asked liberty to kill Saul, but hindered by David, 1 Sam. 26. 7;—desired to kill Shimei when he cursed David, 2 Sam. 16. 9;—slays a mighty giant, 21. 17;—with his spear cut off 300 men, 23. 18.

Abner, [my father's lamp] the general of Ishbosheth, his men and those of David fight, 2 Sam. 2. 12;—kills Asahel the brother of Joab, 23;—revolts to David, 3. 6;—killed by Joab, 27.

Abominations, sins in general, Isa. 66. 3 Jer. 44. 4;—idols so called, 1 Kings 11. 7; 2 Kings 23. 13; Isa. 66. 3.

Abomination of Desolation, the Roman army so called on account of its ensigns and images, which the soldiers worshipped, Matt. 24. 15, compared with Dan. 9. 27.

Abraham, [father of a multitude] called at 75 years of age to leave his native country and kindred, Gen. 12. 1;—God promises to make him the father of a great nation, and of the Messiah, 2, 3;—he departs with Sarai his wife, and Lot his brother's son, 4, 5;—builds altars in Canaan, and calls on the name of the Lord, 7, 8;—goes into Egypt on account of a famine, 10;—from fear of the king, denies his wife, 14—20;—returns to Canaan, 13. 1;—separates from Lot, 5, &c.;—God renews his promise to him, 14, &c.;—rescues Lot, 14. 14, &c.; is blessed by Melchizedec, 18, &c.;—a son promised to him, 15. 4;—Sarai gives him Hagar to be his wife, 16. 3;—who bears him Ishmael, 15;—God renews his promise and covenant with him and his seed, 17. 1—14;—circumcises all the males of his household, 23, &c.;—entertains three angels, 18. 1, &c.;—promise of a son by Sarah renewed to him, which she hearing, laughed, 12;—intercedes for Sodom, 23, &c.;—sojourns in Gerar, 20. 1;—a second time denies his wife, 2;—enters into a treaty with Abimelech, 21. 22, &c.;—Isaac is born to him, 21. 1, &c.;—casts out Hagar and her son, 9, &c.;—called to offer Isaac, 22. 2, &c.;—purchases a burying place for Sarah, 23. 1, &c.;—sends his servant for a wife to Isaac, 24. 1, &c.;—his sons by Keturah, 25. 1, &c.;—his age and burial, 7;—Christ's discourse concerning his seed, John 8. 37—58;—justified before God, not by works, but by faith, Rom. 4. 1—22;—he and his believing seed the true church, Gal. 3. 7; 4. 22;—justified before men, or proved to be a believer, by works, James 2. 21.

Absalom, [father of peace] kills his brother Amnon, 2 Sam. 13. 23;—flies to Talmai king of Geshur, 37;—recalled, 14. 21;—his beauty, &c. 25;—brought to his father, 33;—rebels, 15. 1, &c.—defeated and slain, 18. 9.

Abstinence. See Fasting and Temperance.

Abyss, or Deep, the chaos on which the Spirit of God moved, Gen. 1. 2;—the place of the dead, Rom. 10. 7;—also hell, Luke 8. 31; Rev. 9. 1; 11. 7; 20. 3.

Accept, God accepts men's persons and services only through Christ, Eph. 1. 6; 1 Pet. 2. 5.

Jerusalem, [the vision or possession of peace] the metropolis of the kingdom of Judah, and the seat of government during the reigns of David, Solomon, and their successors. It was called Salem in the time of Abraham, Gen. 14. 8; Heb. 7. 2;—and it was called Jebus at the time Israel obtained possession of the Holy Land, Josh. 15. 8; 18. 28; 1 Chr. 11. 4. It seems probable, therefore, that the name Jerusalem, is merely a compound of the terms Jebus and Salem. In its most flourishing state, it consisted of four parts, built on four hills; namely, Zion, Acra, Moriah, and Bezetha. In fact the whole foundation was a high rock, with four heads or hills, and with steep ascents on every side, except the north; and surrounded with a deep valley, which was embosomed with hills. The city was encompassed with three walls, over which there were towers; and appears to have been about four miles and a half in circumference. It was taken by the children of Judah, Judg. 1. 8;—recovered by the Jebusites, 21;—by David, 2 Sam. 5. 6; 1 Chr. 11. 4;—expostulated with and threatened for its crimes, Jer. 1. 15; 2; 3; 4. 19; 5; 6; 7; 8; 9; 10. 17, &c.; 11. 1, &c.; Ez. 21; 22. 1, &c.;—described as an exposed infant, 16. 1, &c.;—taken by Nebuchadnezzar, 2 Kings 25. 4; 2 Chr. 36. 17; Jerem. 39. 1; 52. 4, &c.;—burned, 52. 12;—represented as a female captive, Isa. 3. 26;—its desolation lamented, Lam. 1, &c.;—its captivity represented by a figure, Ezek. 4. 1; 5. 1; to be rebuilt, Jerem. 31. 38;—built after the captivity, Nehem. 3. 1, &c.;—after much opposition, 4. 1, &c.;—its walls finished, 6. 15;—its inhabitants chosen by lot, 11. 1, &c.;—the dedication of its walls, 12. 27;—its future state, Ezek. 48. 30;—its new name, 35;—Christ's lamentation over it, Matt. 23. 37;—foretells the destruction of the temple, and of it, 24. 2—28;—and represents the gospel, Gal. 4. 26;—a new one descending from heaven, Rev. 21. 2, 10.

Wit, we do you to wit, we inform you, 2 Cor. 8. 1.

Witches, are women, and Wizards are men, who practised secret arts, and pretended to do so by the assistance of some evil spirit, who was ever ready at their call. They appear to have been acquainted with the art of Ventriloquism, by which they made the sounds of their voice to be heard, as if they issued from their belly, or from the ground; and then pretended that it was the evil spirit speaking, Isa. 8. 19; 29. 4. By this, and other impostures, they deceived men, and excited a belief and dread of their power, as if they had been able to reveal secrets, and to perform deeds, beyond the province of mortals. On these accounts God was justly displeased with them, and required them to be cut off, Ex. 22. 18; Lev. 20. 27; Deut. 18. 10, 11.

Witchcraft, strictly forbidden, Lev. 19. 26, 31; 20. 6; Deut. 18. 10; Mal. 3. 5; Rev. 21. 8; 22. 15;—instances of it and of similar acts, 1 Sam. 28. 7; 2 Kings 9. 22; 17. 17; 21. 6; 2 Chr. 33. 6; Acts 8. 9; 16. 16; 19. 19.

Withal, likewise, or at the same time, 1 Kings 9. 22; Psal. 141. 10; Acts 25. 27;—with or by means of, Ex. 25. 29; 30. 4.
